Meaing of Grand Trunk Shareholders.

President Sir Henry Tyler's Policy Sustained

By an Overwhelming Majority - The Retiring Directors Re-elected.

TORONTO, April 28.—A cable dispatch received to-day from London says:

"The meeting of the Grand Trunk Railway shareholders which was adjourned from April 4 was held here to-day, when the policy of the president, Sir Henry Tyler, was confirmed.

"The retiring directors, Lord Claude Hamilton and Messrs. Gillespie, Heygate and Lethbridge, were re-elected by a vote of 47,230 to 20,799."

London, April 28.—The poll taken at the adjourned meeting of Grand Trunk chareholders to-day resulted in the reelection of Mr. Heygate, Mr. Gillespie, Mr. Lethbridge and Lord Claud Hamilton as directors by two votes to one. An attempt was made to hold a meeting to attempt was made to hold a meeting to discuss Tupper's further charges and the general policy of the Board, but it was announced that the meeting was merely called for purposes of the poll. Tupper was not present. Sir Henry Tyler has sent e Times a reply to Tupper's last letter, but it has not yet appeared.

THE FEELING IN MONTREAL. MONTREAL, April 28 .- Nothing but satisfaction is expressed here over the result of the Grand Trunk Railway meeting in London to-day. Mr. Wainwright said to-night they had anticipated this result, as the Grand Trunk had done nothing wrong either toward the country or shareholders. He explained that at the meeting a fortnight ago while there were 500 persons night ago while there were 500 persons present only 70 had remained to vote after the reports had been adopted. The action of Sir Henry Tyler in adjourning the meeting for a fortnight, he said, showed the fearlessness of his course and confidence in the result. Though he had sufficient proxies the result of the voting to-day showed he had the meeting with him, as the proxies were not required.

A Race for Eaby's Life.

HINTON, Pa., April 29.—A thrilling incident occurred at Dimmock station as No. 13 west bound accommodation dashed into this place. Engineer Fox saw a 2-year-old child standing on the track about 100 yards ahead. He did all he could to stop the train, but in vain, and it seemed as if the child was doomed, when Fireman McAlhattan fairly snatched it from the jaws of death. Leaping from the cab he ran like a deer, while a score of anxious eyes watched death. Leaping from the cab he ran like a deer, while a score of anxious eyes watched the race between the fleet-footed fellow and the scarcely slackening speed of the engine. The brave man won the race and gained a life for the prize. He sprang in front of the engine, snatched the child from the wheels, and handed it safely to its mother. The latter murmured a few broken words of thanks, took a few steps, then sank to the ground powerless. A cheer was given for the fireman and the baby, and the train swent on.

On motion to adjourn, Mr. Meredith called attention to the rule adopted for the rest of the week to open the House at 11 a.m., and suggested that as several important committees had to meet to-morrow it would be advisable to allow them the morning for their work and not to have the House called until the afternoon. Mr. Mowat concurred, and the House adjourned. bill did not interfere with local questions in Newfoundland nor with the independence of the Colonial Legislature. He also said if was a matter of imperial obligation that the arrangements affect obligation that the arrangements affecting the fishing rights of France should be as binding upon the colony as upon the empire. The Government, he added, desires to meet the wishes of the colonies so far as is consistent with international obligations. Lord Knutsford added that the measure took the colony by surprise. The Colonial Government, he said, never held out any hopes that they would consent to legislation on the basis of arbitration, and they could not expect the French Government to accept general arbitration. If the colonists made that the sine qua non, the Imperial Government sine qua non, the Imperial Government would go on with the bill in its present form. The second reading of the bill would not take place in the House of Commons before Whitsuntide (week of May 15), thus giving ample time to consider any amend-ment which might be suggested. He hoped reasonable counsels would prevail and thus maintain harmony all around. He said that if before the bill reached the House of Commons the Colonial Legislature passed an act which in the Government's opinion was sufficient to secure the observance of the modus vivendi of 1891 and to enforce the decision of the arbitration commission on the lobster question, and, in regard to the treaties existing between England and the treaties existing between language. France, the Government would not proceed with the bill. But if such an act was not passed by the Colonial Legislature, it would be necessary to pass the Imperial Government's measure as rapidly as possible. The ment's measure as rapidly as possible. The Government was ready to consider with the Newfoundland delegates the terms of the bill which they suggested might be discussed. But difficulties of an international character required careful, handling, and the passage of the Colonial Act should not be delayed until the terms proposed by the Imperial Bill were settled. The Government saw no difficulty in giving Newfoundland representation on the Arbitration Commission. In fact the Government had requested the colony to name a delegate to act on the present Arbitration Commission, but the colony had refused to do so. "The colonists may be assured," said Lord Knutsford, "that we should not further press any of the subsidiary points referred to arbitration until the Imperial Government had fully consulted the colonists."

The Earl of Kimberley said the Newfoundland Government ought to have been notified by the Imperial Government of its intention in regard to Newfoundland. The present position of affairs demanded that the bill should not be carried further until the Newfoundland Legislature had further considered the matter. Lord Kimberley hoped Lord Knutsford's measure would never be required.

Lord Dunraven criticised the bill ad

St. Johns, Nfld., April 28.—A newspaper correspondent at Trinity Bay writes:
"Trinity has always had the reputation of being a loyal town, and it justly deserved the reputation, but so greatly has the public mind been agitated by the attempted coercive legislation of Lord Salisbury that there is not a man in the place that would not willingly have the country severed from Great Britain to-morrow. A public presting was convend here for the purpose meeting was convened here for the purpose of expressing disapproval of Lord Salis-bury's action a few days since. Intelligence has been received here to the Intelligence has been received here to the effect that a number of the vessels in Fortune Bay have forced the blockade and taken bait to St. Pierre. There were as many as 100 vessels in Bay d'Este, and, though there have been angry mutterings and smothered threats, it was not anticipated anything would come of it. Last week, however, 40 craft boldly weighed anchor and made sail. The bait protection fleet did everything to prevent the vessels from going out, but beyond capturing one "laggard" nothing else was done, as far as can be learned. The bait squadron were taken by surprise. They squadron were taken by surprise. They had not time to read the Riot Act—and the police had only blank cartridges in their guns—not that it was even intended to fire guns—not that it was even intended to fire on the men, it being supposed that the "helmeted horde" of constabulary would be sufficient to awe them into subjection. But with starving families and herring $6 per barrel in $t. Pierre the men were willing to take their chances and go. No doubt their names have been taken, and they will be duly dealt with later on.

HALIFAX, April 29.—The $t. Johns, Newfoundland, Telegram gives the following: By advices from $t. Pierre, we learn that the French are sorely straitened for want of bait, and compelled to admit that want of bait, and compelled to admit that they cannot carry on the bank fishery inde-pendent of supplies from the Newfoundland coast. They now offer $5 per barrel for her-ring without avail, and large numbers of their banking vessels are lying idle, every effort to obtain supplies having completely failed.

The price held out by the French naturally proves a strong temptation to the people at Fortune Bay, and it taxes the utmost energies and all the resources of those engaged in the bait protection service to prevent convenience. those engaged in the bait protection service to prevent smuggling. In one or two cases violence has been used by owners of crafts. The other day a boat in charge of a police officer overhauled a craft bound to St. Pierre from Bay-du-Nord. It was commanded by a man named Baracada, who was ordered to heave to, but he defied the summons. A boat was launched from the steamer, and was rowed alongside, and when the police officer jumped on deck, three hands offithe craft stepped up to him, and, lifting him up in their arms tossed him overboard into the sea as unconcerned as they would a bag of hay. The crew of the officer's boat rescued him not much the worse for his ducking, and the steamer, then took possession of the craft and towed her into Harbor Bakes, where the law-defying individuals were handed over to the care of the authorities. On the Government being appraised of the situation at Fortune Bay and the extraordinary efforts of the French to obtain bait, the Lady Glovet was ordered to join the Fiona, and the steamship Hercules, with ten constables on board, has also started for the scene of danger. In addition to these precautions, a gunboat has been ordered from Halifax.
