"Quick, sir!" Henry said with impatience, as soon as I came within hearing.
Do not detain me with your affairs longer than is necessary. M. de Turenne presses me to carry into effect the order I gave yesterday. But as you have placed yourself in jeopardy on my account I feel that something is due to you. You will be good enough, therefore, to present yourself at once at M. la Varenne's lodging, and give me your parole to remain there withbut stirring abroad until your affair is con-

Aware that I owed this respite, which at once secured my present safety and promised well for the future, to the great event that, even in M. de Turenne's mind, had overshadowed all others, I bowed in silence. Henry, however, was not content with this. "Come sir," he said sharply, and with every appearance of anger, "do you agree to that?"

I replied humbly that I thanked him for his clemency.

"There is no need of thanks, he replied "What I have done is without coldly. "What I have done is without prejudice to M. de Turenne's complaint. He must have justice."

I bowed again, and in a moment the troop were gone on a gallop towards Meudon, whence, as I afterwards learned, the King of Navarre, attended by a select body of five-and-twenty horsemen, wearing private arms, rode on at full speed to St. Cloud to bresent himself at His Majesty's bedside. A groom who had caught the Cid, which had escaped into the town with no other injury there a slight wound in the shoulder. injury than a slight wound in the shoulder, by-and-bye met me with the horse; and in this way I was enabled to render myself with some decency at Varenne's lodging, a small house at the foot of the hill, not far from the Castle-gate. Here I found myself under no greater constraint than that which my parole laid upon me; and my room having the convenience of a window looking upon the public street, I was enabled from hour to hour to comprehend and enter into the various alarms and surprises which made that day remarkable. The manifold reports which flew from nouth to mouth on the occasion, as well as ne overmastering excitement which seized are so well remembered however, that rbear to dwell upon them, though they ed to distract my mind from my own sition. Suffice it that at one moment we heard that His Majesty was dead, at another that the wound was skin deep, and again that we might expect him at Meudon before sunset. The rumor that the duchess of Montpensier had taken poison was no sooner believed than we were asked to listen to the guns of Paris firing feux de joie in honor of the king's death. The streets were so closely packed with persons telling and hearing these tales that seemed from my window to be looking on a fair. Nor was all my amusement without-doors; for a number of the gentlemen of the Court, hearing that I had been in St. Cloud in the morning, and in the very chamber, a thing which made me for the moment the most desirable companion in the world, remembered on a sudden that they had a slight acquaintance with me, and honored me by calling upon me and sitting a great part of the day with me. From which circumstance I confess I gathered as much hope as they diversion; knowing that courtiers are the best weather-prophets in the world, who hate nothing so much as to be discoverd in the company of those on whom the sun does not

which happened about the middle of the afternoon, while it dissipated the fears of SWAYNE'S OINTMENT. Lyman, Sons & Co., some and dashed the hones of others, put an end to this state of uncertainty by confirming, to the surprise of many that His Majesty was in no danger. We learned with varying emotions that the first appearances, which had deceived, not myself but experienced leeches, had been themselves belied by subsequent conditions; and that, in a word, Paris had as much to fear, and loyal men as much to hope, as before this wicked and audacious

I had no more than stomached this surprising information, which was less welcome to me, I confess, than it should have been, when the arrival of M. d'Agen, who greeted me with the affection he never failed to show me, distracted my thoughts for a time. Immediately on learning where I was and the strange adventures which had befallen me he had ridden off; stopping only once, when he had nearly reached me, for the purpose of waiting on Madame de Bruhl. I asked him how she had received him.

"Like herself," he replied with an ingenious blush. "More kindly than I had a right to expect, if not as warmly as I had the courage to hope."

"That will come with time," I said, "That will come with time," I said, laughing, "And Mademoiselle de la Vire?"
"I did not see her," he answered, "but I heard she was well. And a hundred fathoms deeper io love," he added, eyeing me roguishly, "then when I saw her last."

It was my turn to color now, and I did so, feeling all the pleasure and delight such a statement was calculated to afford me, Picturing mademoiselle as I had seen her last, leaning from her horse with love written so plainly on her weeping face that all who ran might read, I sank into so delicious a reverie that M. la Varenne, entering suddenly, surprised us both before another word passed on either side.

His look and tone were as abrupt as it was his nature, which was soft and com-pliant, to make them. "M. de Marsac," he said, "I am sorry to put any constraint upon you, but I am directed to forbid you to your friends. And I must request this gentleman to withdraw."

"But all day my friends have come in and out," I said with surprise. "Is this a "A written order, which reached me no farther back than two minutes ago," he answered plainly. "I am also directed to remove you to a room at the back of the house, that you may not overlook the "Bur my parole was caken," I cried, with a natural feeling of indignation.

He shrugged his shoulders. "I am sorry to say that I have nothing to do with that," he answered. "I can only obey orders. I must ask this gentleman, therefore, to with-

Of course M, d' Agen had no option but to leave me; which he did, I could see, not-withstanding his easy and confident expressions, with a good deal of mistrust and apprehension. When he was gone, La Varenne lost no time in carrying out the remainder of his orders. As a cousequence I found myself confined to a small and gloomy apartment which looked, at a distance of three paces, upon the smooth face of the rock on which the Castle stood. This change, from a window which commanded all the life of the town, and intercepted every breath of popular fancy, to a closet whither no sounds penetrated, and where the very transition from noon to evening acarcely made itself known, could not fail to depress my spirits sensibly; the more as new Fire Kindler.

Reflecting that I must now appear to the King of Navarre in the light of a bearer of false tidings, 1 associated the order to confine me more closely with his return from St. Cloud; and comprehending that M. de Turenne was once more at liberty to attend to my affairs, I began to look about me with forebodings which were none the less painful because the parole I had given debarred me from any attempt to escape.

Sleep and habit enabled me, nevertheless, to pass the night in comfort. Very early in the morning a great firing of guns, which made itself heard even in my quarters, led me to suppose that Paris had surrendered; but the servant who brought me my breakfast declined in a surly fashion to give me any information. In the end, I spent the whole day alone, my thoughts divided between my mistress and my own prospects, which seemed to grow more and more gloomy as the hours succeeded one another. No one came near me, no step broke the silence of the house; and for a while I thought my guardians had forgotten even that I needed food. This omission, it is true, was made good about sunset, but still M. la Varenne did not appear, the servant appeared to be dumb, and I heard no unds in the house. I had finished my meal an hour or more, and the room was growing dark, when the silence was at last broken by quick steps passing along the entrance. They paused, and seemed to hesitate at the foot of the stairs, but the next moment they came on again, and stoped at my door. I rose from my seat on hearing the key turned in the lock, and my astonishment may be conceived when I saw no other than M. de Turenne enter, and close the door behind

They Swarmed Over Jersey Excursionists and Frightened the Women.

PERTH AMBROY, N. J., June 15 .- A swarm of 17-year locusts took possession of a Long Branch train near Avenel the other morning, and for a time there was abandon the coaches and let the locusts retain them. The train which experienced this unusual trouble was No. 987, of the Pennsylvania Railroad. It left Jersey City at 10 o'clock. The warm weather tempted hundreds to visit the coast towns, and the train was heavily loaded.

The heat had caused almost every window to be opened, and when the train came to Avenal the passengers leaned out to look at the hundreds of thousands of the locusts on the ground and in the air. They would have been satisfied with this, but the locusts were not. Before the passengers were aware what was happening, the pests had swarmed up the sides of the cars, and through the windows and doors inside. Women screamed and stood on the seats with their skirts drawn up so as to avoid immediate contact with the crawling objects. They soon had to let go their skirts and pay undivided attention to keeping the locusts from their hats and faces. The more timid passengers started for the doors, but at that moment the cars started. The rush of wind seemed to disconcert the pests. Those on the cutside of the cars dropped off, and those inside clung closely to the seats or floors, and were soon thrown out of the windows by the train hands who started through the cars.

Why the Duke D'Auxy Lets the Duchess Attend to Household Expenses.

NEW YORK, June 15 .- Arthur Charles Eugene Edward Duke D'Auxy, having failed to pay a judgment for $78 24 on a grocery bill, is now being examined in supplementary proceedings. Nellie Schnelling has the judgment in return for the groceries.

The duke inherited his title and one sixth of his father's estate of $1,000,000 about 25 years ago. His patrimony he disposed of some years prior to his marriage, but he still has his title.

He married Charlotte Lucy Antoinette Lamar in Paris twelve years ago. He testified before Referee William J. Boyhan yesterday that he supports himself with his wife's income; that he never had an occupation, and possesses nothing in this country, although he thinks perhaps he has propagate elgium; that he has not had an i or some years; that the duchess rec .s income from him, but that she pay ... the expenses of his house.

Ine duchess rents the house and receives and pays for everything, according to Duke D'Auxy, and she allows him his board, but gives him no money except for daily expenses. Up to six months ago he kept an account in the Second National Bank, but it was his wife's money, which was used to pay household expenses. Speaking of the rent of the flat in which he lives he said: "I do not know even whether there is a lease. It is none of my business. The duchess attends to all

BABY MUST BE WEANED,

A Nourishing and Health-Giving Diet is Necessary.

Lactated Food a Perfect Substitute for Mother's Milk.

Baby must be weaned. The change is often fraught with great danger to the little darlings. Hundreds of babies die a few weeks after they have been deprived of nature's fount of life. No wonder we hear of so many deaths at weaning time; it is sheer nonsense to expect a weak and delicate stomach to retain prepared foods that would give indigestion to an adult.

When baby is about to be weaned, it is absolutely necessary to provide a food that contains the principal constituents of mother's milk. Science has given mothers the celebrated Lactated Food which is a perfect substitute for breast milk. It is nourishing, strengthening, easily assimilated, readily digested and very palatable. When Lactated Food is used, babies can be weaned sefely and easily in the heat of summer. This scientific Food aids and corrects digestion, and protects from all the dangerous and deadly summer complaints.

Thousands of doctors, mothers and nurses in Canada know the life-giving properties of Lactated Food, and strongly recommend it.

Evidences of Slight Improvement-Collapse of the Coal Strike Near at Hand-Marked Decrease in the Number of Failures.

NEW YORK, June 15 .- R. G. Some time must elapse before supplies of fuel will enable all works to resume that have no other reason for suspending production. Meanwhile the demand for products is so slack that it seems questionable whether as many hands

June as were employed in April. Many boot and shoe shops have stopped, but shipments from the east are ten per cent. larger for June than for last year. The demand is mainly confined to low priced goods. The woolen mills are closing rapidly. It is asserted scarcely any of them have orders to occupy them beyond July 1 in men's wear, but in the demand for dress-goods a somewhat better tone is perceived. Further concessions have not enlarged the demand for cotton goods. That goods are accumulating is evident, but sales have been distinctly improved with the weather.

Exports from New York for two weeks of June have been 7 per cent larger in value than last year, while imports at this point have been 18 per cent smaller. It is reasonable to expect that the resumption of work at the coal mines will considerably increase railway receipts.
