LONDON, FRIDAY, MARCH 31. Newfoundland Retaliates.

Naturally enough, Newfoundland will retaliate for the burking of the Hay-Bond treaty by cutting off the bait supply of our fishermen. This goes to prove that even the Gloucester fishermen, in whose interest the treaty was amended out of existence cannot eat their cake and have it. Such a discrimination as it is said Newfoundland will make against our fisheries is the sign of a growing and unfortunate alienation. Yesterday a prominent Canadian newspaper proprietor told our Washington correspondent that not for years had the annexationist sentiment been so slight in Canada. This is well so far as it means going slow in the matter of a doubtful union, but ill so far as it means that Canada is generally indifferent to the relation she bears to us. Such a feeling is natural, for in almost all her negotia-tions with us she has met with unmerited rebuffs. Meanwhile she is gaining in riches, and the possibilities of mutual profitable relations are constantly increasing. There never was a time when a reasonable readjustment of tariffs was likely to be more valuable, but what can we expect when the senate picks all reciprocity treaties to pieces, or ignores them, and the very name of revision is anathema in Republican councils?-New York Post,

The Post states the situation clearly In Canada prosperity has made us more indifferent to the United States than at any period in our history; and our neighbors are likely to feel the edge of the next tariff revision at Ottawa unless they anticipate it by a proffer of commercial friendship. The Government of Newfoundland has taken the first step in a policy of reprisals by ordering its customs collect ors to refuse bait licenses to American fishermen. In 1886, as an outcome of resentment over the French shore question, the Newfoundland Legislature passed the Bait Act, which prohibited the export of bait fishes to St. Pierre and Miquelon for use by the French for their Bank fishery. The act was not allowed by the British Government, but the colonial Legislature repassed it in 1887, and after great pressure the imperial authorities sanctioned it. The Bait Act struck a mortal blow at the fishing interests of St. Pierre and Miquelon, despite the sustenance of the French Government in the form of liberal bounties. Newfoundland is in a position to inflict similar injury on the Gloucester, Mass., fishing industry. The bait used for the off-shore fishing is the small fish caught in inshore waters, and the law prohibits their catch inside the three-mile limit by any except the island people. The purchase of bait is a privilege for which the Gloucester fishermen have shown themselves ungrateful, as they have been the means of burking several treaties negotiated between the respective Governments. The existing modus vivendi permits American fishermen to enter the harbors of Newfoundland, purchase bait, ice, supplies, and equipment, and hire crews. This arrangement has been continued by Newfoundland in the expectation of favors in the United States market, especially the free admission of fish. This was provided for in the Hay-Bond treaty, which was recently amended to death by the United States Senate, with inconceivable stupidity. Newfoundland is therefore justified in refusing to promote the interests of rival fishermen, who show so little regard for fair play. They have only themselves to blame if they find their livelihood endangered.

Under such circumstances the Government may possibly continue to hold office for one month, two months, six months, or even a year more, but you will never find in the history of this country that this had the result of increasing the credit of a Government with those on whose favor their fortunes ultimately rest."

Temperance People Alarmed.

Dr. Chown, the secretary of the ioral reform and temperance committee of the Methodist Church of Canada, is uneasy over developments in the license department. In a letter Winter is worth while for the reward to the Globe he says the temperance is spring. people of Ontario cannot know too soon that designs are afoot which, if successful, "will rivet the chains of the liquor traffic more firmly upon our people than ever before." He expresses confidence in the good faith of the Premier and Provincial Secretary, but says the Conservative patronage committees of various ridings are pressing for the appointment of men "entirely unsuited and in some cases positively antagonistic to the duties that would devolve upon them." Dr. Chown cites some of these cases and adds:

"It has also come to our knowledge that a movement is on foot, how widespread we cannot say at present, which aims at the submission of all applications for license, as well as all appointments to office, to the patronage committee of the Conservative party in each riding. It will appear at once that if this be carried into effect the license commissioners will be mere figureheads, the license inspector will be a puppet of the patronage committee, and the is open for the party managers take space to point out all the evils that would flow from such a system, but we call upon temperance workers everywhere to be alert to prevent the selling out of our cause by such tricksters. We call upon every independent Conservative to put his foot down heavily upon such procedure, and we call upon the Government to be wise and strong enough to resist all such efforts to rob the people of their rights."

Then it will be good night.

How can I call the lone night good.

Though thy sweet wishes wing its flight?

Dr. Chown compliments the late Provincial Secretary for intimating to certain license commissioners, who did To hearts which near each other move. not feel their responsibility to the temperance interest, that their resignations would be accepted. He hopes the present Provincial Secretary will pursue the same course.

Before the election, Mr. Whitney solemnly and specifically declared that the Conservative party, if successful. would "take the license administration out of politics." This was an implied attack upon the license system, but the new Government shows no intention of changing it, the only changes being in the personnel of the license boards and the dismissal of a number of inspectors. It was not charged that the license commissioners, during Liberal rule, were under
