ILLNESS HASTENS END OF GREAT RUN

GEORGE MULLIN.

The Tigers had three runs before the Athletics got one, and at the end of the fifth inning were in the lead by a 4 to 1 score. At this time it looked like a certain Detroit award. But in the sixth the effect of Mullin's recent illness seemed to begin to tell on him. He lost his speed, and did not work at all as he had in the early innings. Three hits were made in the sixth, and these with two outfield errors, cost two runs. The hitting was the warning to withdraw the twirler, and substitute a new man. He was allowed to go through, however, and three more in the seventh, including a double and triple, cost him his game. After that the Tigers had but one chance to get back, and then they failed to finish what they started. Mullin had won eleven straight.
