My dear Currie,

Pray forgive a belated letter.
It is exactly a month ago since I frosted my way round Dixie and, as I write on Sunday afternoon, I hope you are now engaged in the same pleasant-occupation (without the frozing of course).

No doubt you have heard something of the adventures of the Melagamas' passengers since we parted on the platform at Montreal. There for forty-eight hours we trundled through the back woods of New Brunswick and then spent a similar time in Labrador at St. John.
