

—Hands freezing—Seraphic music—Gorgeous colors—Snowshoe tracks transformed into luxurious couches—The warning voice—The rough trip—Returning vitality—The narrow escape from freezing to death—Similar experiences of arctic explorers and other northern travelers who have been nearly frozen to death—A necessary buffeting. . . Page 150

CHAPTER XIII.

Camp-fire stories—Baptiste's story of the battle between two buffalo bulls and a grizzly bear—Sammo's story of being chased by a grizzly bear that robbed him of his antelope meat—Sandy Bar—The story of the plum-pudding and the happy Indians. 158

CHAPTER XIV.

Exploring new fields—Dangers in the way—Dog-traveling by night—Breaking through the ice—Sagacious dogs—Scant supplies and hungry Indians—Indian hospitalities—A successful bear-hunter—Primitive methods of eating—A dinner under peculiar circumstances—Attentive hearers of the word—Ice-rafts—The successful wild-cat hunter—Preaching the word as we journey on—Sleeping twenty-three strong in a small wigwam—A troublesome dog—Hitting Oojibetoos by mistake—An almost tragedy turned into a comedy—"All's well that ends well" 170

CHAPTER XV.

Courtship and marriage—Rapid changes—Different tribal customs—Fluctuating prices paid for wives—Marriage of old Ja-koos—Wedding-feast—Nervous attempts at civilized courtship—Seeking assistance—Young maidens anticipating leap-year privileges—Barkis-like, she was "quite willing" 184

CHAPTER XVI.

Indian wit and humor—The dish of horse-radish—General Custer's story of the chief who surrendered because a whole mule was fired at him—Quaint stories of John Sunday—His fable of the black-snake and the frog—How John silenced the Mormon preacher—How near he came to getting a D.D.—His quaint missionary appeal to Mr. Gold—Old Thickfoot—The stolid, humorous chief's idea of sin—An Indian's shrewdness in carrying cider in a basket—A sensible reply to a challenge to fight a duel—The Indian magistrate who fined both plaintiff and defendant—A queer verdict—"Man-afraid-of-nothing" 192