

son. — How the Inhabitants amuse themselves. — Distinguished Characters. — A Tragedy. — Mrs. Paige again. — Shocking Sight. — We leave Tucson under Captain Ewell's Escort. — Scenery. — Apaches. — The Flight and Pursuit. — A Spirited Scene. — Will they overtake us? — Camp. — The Return. — Result of the Chase. — Expedition into the Mountains. — What we found. — The Apaches asleep. — The Apaches awake. — An exciting Adventure. — A Stampede. — What happened, and how it happened. - - - 199

CHAPTER XV.

A Storm in the Mountains, and what came of it. — How the Apaches stampede Stock. — What Captain Ewell found. — On the Road once more. — The Captain meets his Apache Friends. — How they shook Hands. — We find Cochise at Apache Pass. — The San Cimon. — Castles in Spain. — What shall we do? — Apache Attack. — A lucky Shot. — Consternation. — The Return for the Dead. — I acquire a Reputation as a Marksman, and take good care not to spoil it. — Attack upon the Overland Mail Coach. — The Conductor killed. — The Great Door to the Pacific Slope. — Doubtful Pass. — Stein's Peak? — Watch and Ward. — The Backbone of the Continent. — A Magnificent Sight. — Mountain Sheep. — A Mountain Lake. — Two tiny Streams, springing from the same Source. — A Continent divides them. — The Cereus Grandes. — A Picture. — A Mirror silvered by Nature's own Hand. — The Moonlight and its Effect. — The Soldier's Farewell. - - - - - 220

CHAPTER XVI.

Thirty-two Miles. — A Panorama. — Grand Mountain Scenery. — Our Descent. — The Great Plateau. — A natural Route for a Railroad. — The Thirty-second Parallel. — A parched and endless Waste. — No Water. — A wonderful Mirage. —