Is your factory properly lighted?

Labor can be efficient only when working in pure air, at a moderate temperature, and with proper light. The absence of any one renders the others useless.

Too much emphasis cannot be placed upon the importance of proper illum nation for factories. Aside from the effect it has upon the efficiency of your workmen, it is an economy

Nothing employed by you in manufacturing has improved to a greater degree within the past few years than the methods of factory illumination. If your present lighting system is not from fifty to one hundred per cent. better than it was three years ago, you are wasting money for current you do not utilize, and you are wasting light that is lost on the walls and ceilings instead of being concentrated on
