Do You Know What A Clearance Sale Actually Means

By J. R. HAMILTON

Former Advertising Manager Wanamaker's, Philadelphia

AFTER YOU have read the advertising in this paper today, you are going to get down to these stores as quickly as the doors are open and then there is going to be enacted a scene that will make the old Manchester Bread Riots look like a peaceful Sunday in the park.

After you have found all the remarkable bargains in this paper today, all you have to do is to figure up how many thousands of women have also found them and then in this case you will figure it is better to be early than to be "Queen of the May."

Of course you are going to these January Sales, but now the questions are, Why are we going? And do you know why the merchants are holding such sales?

"Why," you say, "they are trying to get rid of their surplus stock."

But that doesn't answer the question, especially for staple merchandise. People are going to wear shoes next year, and therefore why should a real dollar or more be cut from the price of such staples as shoes.

People are going to wear skirts and stockings and underwear and coats. They are going to continue to use knives and forks and kitchen utensils, so why should the prices on these staple things be cut to such a point as to make you fling on your hat and start for a bargain sale as if you were starting for a fire.

The answer in a word is that the greatest dread any merchant knows is that of a broken or an uneven stock of merchandise. Most merchants refer to such a stock as a "junk shop," and they dread it more than anything else.

If a merchant has a broken stock of a certain kind of shoes, his clerks or his salesmen do not please you when you come to buy and you go out to where you can be pleased. If you see a certain skirt pattern that you like, and you are suddenly told that you can only get that pattern in size 16, you sigh wearily and turn away from the counter.

Merchants have learned all these things by long and bitter experience, and that is why they are willing to sell all and any of their broken lines at these prices no matter how staple these lines may be, in order that they may accomplish this one end of a clean store and complete merchandise.

A word to the wise is sufficient. In this paper today these merchants are selling you what they have at such remarkable bargain prices as to stir every instinct which every woman has for Economy.

And if what they have happens to be what you want, you will save so much money, that it will seem as if Santa Claus had left you a Bank Account.

But Remember! the secret of big bargains in these bargain days is for you to have the advertising at your finger tips and to be in the stores a half an hour earlier than those "hateful" other women who are trying to beat you there.

"A Blow Below the Belt."

We wonder sometimes, when we see a chap fall,
When everything seemed his way;
Why he took the "count" in spite of the "call"
To "force the fight" and "stay."
We wonder how he lost his grit,
But don't know how he felt;
When whiskey won and he had to quit
With a "blow below the belt."

We wonder sometimes, when we see a chap rise,
From the blows of old "John Barleycorn";
How he managed to win and "beat the game";
Of the whiskey that led him on.
We wonder how he got his "hold"
And gave alcohol such a "weld,"
'Twas the "NEAL WAY" did it, in "JUST THREE DAYS"
With a "blow below the belt."
