The value of goods entered shows an acrease of $1,147,435, but the duty has nly increased $10,273. This proves that the largest portion of the increased importation was for goods either on the free list or paying low duties. In other words it proves that the people of Canada are increasing their importation of goods paying low rates ot duty or coming in free, and are buying just as little as possible of high dutiable goods, and it also proves that if there were low rates of duties on all goods, or if there were no duties at all, the volume of importation three o'clock in the afternoon by the would increase by leaps and bounds.
