WHAT SHALL-I GIVE HER?

(From the Chicago Tribune.) (From the Chicago Tribune.)
What shall I give my love?
This gray haired woman,
What shall I give her?
Since by fate brought together,
We two have wrought together,
Helping each other
In deed, in thought;
Bach has made the other stronger,
Which else were naught,
What shall I give her?

What shall I give my love?
This gray haired woman.
What shall I give her?
The morn should sing it to me,
The thought I seek!
So close are we
Subtle instinct of affection
Should make easy the selection.
What shall it be?
What shall I give her?

Our beings have a single sum,
Our thoughts in the same channel flow;
This happiness to us has come,
No more we seek ner care to know!
Wound through the fibre of each heart,
Like wire of gold through potter's clay,
This knowledge is the richest part,
Love's handiwork, Love's cloisonne.

What shall I give my love?
This gray haired woman,
It matters not!
I laugh, to ponder o'er it;
She would but wonder o'er it.
Why! she has got
All I can give!
In one our lives are blended, As one will they be ended;
So do we live,
What could I give her?

-Stanley Waterloo.

MY WOLVES. Three gaunt, grim wolves that hunt for men, Three gaunt, grim wolves there be; And one is Hunger, and one is Sin, And one is Misery.

I sit and think till my heart is sore, While the wolf or the wind keeps shaking the doer,
Or peers at his prey through the window-pane
Till his ravenous eyes burn into my brain.

And I cry to myself, "If the wolf be Sin, He shall not come in—he shall not come in; But if the wolf be Hunger or Woe, He will come to all men, whether or no!"

For out in the twilight, stern and grim, A destiny weaves man's life for him, As a spider weaves his web for flies; And the three grim wolves, Sin, Hunger and Woe,
A man must fight them, whether or no,
Though oft in the struggle the fighter dies.

Tonight I cry to God for bread,
Tomorrow night I shall be dead;
For the fancies are strange and scarcely sane,
That fit like spectres through my brain,
And I dream of the time, long, long ago,
When I knew not Sin, and Hunger and Woe.

There are three wolves that hunt for men, And I have met the three,
And one is Hunger, and one is Sin,
And one is Misery;
Three pairs of eyes at the window-pane
Are burned and branded into my basin,
Like signal lights at sea.

re signal lights at sea. -Francis Gerry Fairfield. AFTER THE BALL

The music has died away,

Its rhythm has ceased to thrill;

But echoing notes astray

Are loud in my fancy still.

The ring of that waitz-quadrille,

Like a lullaby song of old,

sounding afreatr in my drowsy ear,
and wheeling before my eyes appear,

Vith gracefulness timed to the hanting strain
ay ribbon, bright jewel and gorgeous train,

A vision of silk and gold.

Fair faces with joy replete
On muscular shoulders lean;
Feet, daintily sandaled feet,
Coquettiably dart between;
White skirts but a moment seen,
Yet lavish in brief display,
Go saucily by with their wanton sweep,
Like patches of foam on the stormy deep,
And fanciful columns retreat, advance,
And mingle again in the fairy dance,
So wild in my brain today.

Stay, resonant music loud, a Yet sweet as a cradic song;
Nor vanish, O phantom crowd, Who gracefully move along;
Still closer around me throng,
Forever I fain would keep
Your beauty to compass the mystic bed
Where reveries nestic and dreams are bred,
Draw nearer and enter my closing eyes,
That closed they may see you agair arise
To dance in the halls of Sleep.
A. E. Kaul, in the San Francisco Wasp. BEYOND THE GATE.

Two dimpled hands the bars of iron grasped Two blue and wondering eyes the space looked through, This massive gate a boundary had been set, Nor was she ever known to be but true.

Strange were the sights she saw across the A little child had died some days before —
And as she watched, amid the silence hushed,
Some carried flowers and some a casket bore.

At the farm house dot.

And eaught in the distance, faint but clear,
The sound of a train, passing, far away.
The warning bell when the start was made,

LONGING.

Come into my heart, love,
Life is slipping by;
Come and chase the shadows, love,
From a darkening sky.

Come, and to an aching heart
Bring thy healing balm;
Come, and still the tempest, love,
To the deepest calm.

Mine has been a weary life, Full of grief and pain; Come, and in its closing hours Make a sweet refrain.

Come, and through the sunset clouds
Cast a golden ray—
Lighting up the dreary road
To eternal day.
H. E. Branch, in Good Housekeeping.

(FOR THE SUN.) SLEIGHING.

Out from the firelight's ruddy glow,
Into the moonlight and over the snow,
Lured by the music of dancing bells,
Music of gladness, whose echo swells,
Backward thrown from the frowning height,

Out from the village, and down the street,
Faster! faster! with flying feet
Our steed skims over the gleaming track,
With never a halt and never a slack,
Till the turn is reached by the ice-bridged rill,
Where the road winds over the frowning hill.

Turn we then, and with laughter gay, Cheerily speed on the homeward way. The air is keen, and the air is cold; But snugly round us the robes we fold, And with bright eyes sparkling and cheeks aglow,

Dash merrily home o'er the moonlit snow. Oh glorious night! Oh tuneful bells!
Within my heart your gladness dwells.
The burden falls from my life away;
Gone are cares that infest the day;
I have shot them through with a shaft of light
That gleaming fell from the grasp of night.

THE PEN.

The poet's words lived long ago,
Amid the strains of pipes and lutes,
Oh lips of those who led their slow
Fiocks fieldward, lingering under low
Wood branches laden with wild fruits.

Forever in some written scroll Too leng the violent sword hath slain
The riven heart, the cloven brain;
But these again shall make them whole.

Their words the pen shall now retain

No more in fragile weeks of song
For changing tongues or times to fray,
But with their primal vigor strong,
Their spirits where their hearts belong, In their own language they shall stay.

Lo this was as a gift of gold To loose the savage arms they wore;
To guard their memories from of old;
As in a casket jeweled to hold
Their richest thoughts forevermore.

Edward McIntyre

A BIRD'S SONG.

The sinking sun had streaked the west
With flecks of gold and crimson bars;
The wandering wind had sunk to rest,
And in the cold east rose the stars. The evening chimes, like gladsome psalm, Pealed loud from out the old church tower And o'er the valley fell the calm
Which broods upon the twilight hour.

Loud through the eve-wrapt, lingering vale,
From humble bower of eglantine,
A blackbird thrilled his mellow tale.
As if he sang through luscious wine.
By cottage, grange and hall around,
Enraptured listeners lingered long;
All heard the selfsame fluting sound,
While each interpreted the song. While each interpreted the song.

A little child, scarce three years old, In wonder woke to visions dim Of crowns and dulcimers of gold, And surging strains of holy hymn,
In that sweet land that's brighter far
Than shining shores in emerald seas,
Where glows the lustrous evening star
Above the fair Hesperides.

A maiden at the moss-fringed well Beside her pitcher lingered long, Her soul enthralled with the strange spell Contained within that mystic song. For oh! to her it ever sings
Of love which all her being fills,
And of the lad that twilight brings
From over the dividing hills.

To child and youth, and maiden fair
That hird made glad the closing day;
But dame and sire with silvered hair
Drew sorrow from its roundelay.
All filtered through the years of woe
On their hearts fell the mellow strain,
Waking the songs of long ago,
And made them sigh for youth again!
All the Year Round.

EWomen are capable of a daring piece of malice now and then, but the very worst on record is that of a brunette who "killed" a blonde rival by wearing a flaming red tulle ball-gown and persisting in shadowing her during the whole evening. Of course the vivid color of the one completely washed out the other's delicate tints, and reduced her pink prettiuess to uch a condition of insipidity as to justify the comment, "How she has gone off!" This is the revenge of the nineteenth century. In the middle ages it would have been a cup of cold poison, or a bit of cold steel.

Its cartoons speak more deficitely and more pleasingly than whole columns of editorial. In this pungent, easily appreciable, and artistic style of presenting a subject, the whole situation is revealed at a glance. The success of Grip shows how well this fact is appreciated—its cartoons on the passing political events of the country being even more eagerly sought after than the chaste and humerous letter press of the paper—though the latter is equal to that of any smallar publication on the continect.

chaste and humerous letter press of the paper—though the latter is equal to that of any similar publication on the continent.

The publishers of Grip are making extensive improvements for 1886. The old cover is to be discarded, and the journal will hereafter comprise 12 pages, and be printed on heavy tened and calcedered paper—every number belog so artistically executed as to compale favorably with the best papers of the kind on the centinent. The solve will be compressed and more systematically arranged; while similar improvements with be made as to the letter press. A new and handsome design will adorn the title page; while the cartons will certainly not suffer from extensive improvements in the artistic department. The price of Grip will hereafter be $3 a year, which is lower than that of any pale of its kind in America—most of them selling for $5. Single numbers of Grip will be 10 cents.

Twice a year, at Midsummer and Caristmas, a beautiful special number will be itsued, the number of pages being increased, and pleasing features introduced—particulars of which will be given in preceding issues. These numbers will be presented to subscribers without extra charge.

Only $3 a Year, Postage Free. Address the Grip Printing and Publishing Com-pany, 26 and 28 Front street West, Toronto; or leave your order with your bookseller or other local agent. 4354
