DEAN PARTRIDGE PASSED AWAY YESTERDAY MORNING Many People Here Very

Surrounded by the members of his it was his habit to sit in silence during family, his physician and his faithful co-worker, the Rev. Sub-Dean Street, Francis Partridge, D. D., Dean of Fredericton, and Canon of Christ church Cathedral, passed away at the Deanery at 9.26 this morning. The end

After having passed a restful night, evident shortly before nine that death was hovering about the bedside and when the call came, a few inutes later, the Dean closed his eyes nd with a happy expression upon his face entered upon his long last sleep. The tolling of the Cathedral bell bore the sad intelligence to the citizens of Fredericton. The news was not unexpected but nevertheless when it was borne forth it fell as a blow on the city. Everyone felt that a Christian, a true and sincere man, an upright, active and progressive citizenhad been lost to the city.

Dean Partridge's death will be a distinct loss, not only to his own denomination, in which he was a leader, but in many other directions. He was a preacher of exceptionally high merit and his discourses ever displayed the greatest search, and in their delivery were most impressive. He was what may be termed a practical preacher and by the youngest his sermons could

Regarding the death of Dean Partridge, Dr. W. O. Raymond spoke as

"Probably there is no single ciergyman of the Church of England in the Maritime Provinces whose loss would be more widely felt. As a scholar, preacher, and as a member of Synod, Dean Partridge occupied a foremost position. He was esteemed for his kindly nature equally as for his great church, but recognizing the good in all. abilities. His removal leaves a vacancy in the councils of the church not easily filled, while to his personal friends his loss will be very keenly felt. The younger clergymen have ever found in him a sympathizing friend, and will share in the general sense of loss with share in the general sense of loss with which the sad news will be received. Canon Richardson said: "The death of Dean Partridge is a great loss to the Church of England, and his place will not be easy to fill. A man of more than ordinary ability, he made himself a scholar of no mean reputation, and was recognized as such in

One of his most striking characteris-tics was his kindliness of disposition, and many of the younger clergy will remember with gratitude the ready way in which he gave them his sympathy and encouragement. His loss in the Diocese will be greatly felt. Rev. A. G. H. Dicker paid the following tribute:

"It has been my privilege to know Dean Partridge intimately from the time of his appointment as dean, and I ever found him a true friend and wise counsellor. Through his long friendship with my dear predecessor, Dean he officiated there was when he preached at Canon DeVeber's funeral. Those who heard it are never likely to forget it. At the grand opening service of the general synod at Quebec last October a beautiful hymn was sung, of which both words and music were composed by Dean Partridge, and at the meetings of the new Canadian hymnal committee, of which we are both members, his suggestions were of great value.
