

Departments of Instruction 1900-1901.

There are five courses of study leading up to graduation, a Collegiate Course, a course in Piano Music, a course in Vocal Music, a course in Art and a course in Elocution.

Instruction is also provided in Violin Music, Stenography and Typewriting.

The Collegiate Course.

This course covers four years, including the preparatory year, and is designed to furnish a thorough and advanced training. A few options are permitted as indicated in the outline of the course.

Students wishing to enter upon the first or preparatory year of the course, must present certificates from the teachers of the Common Schools of N. S., that they have satisfactorily completed the work perscribed for Grade 8, or certificates from the teachers in the other provinces showing that about the same work has been done, or be examined in the following subjects: English Grammar and Analysis, Canadian History, British History, Geography, Arithmetic as in Kirkland and Scott, and elementary work in Algebra.

A provincial certificate of Grade 9, 10 or 11 of the Common Schools of Nova Scotia or its equivalent will admit the holder to the 2nd, 3rd, or 4th years of the Seminary course, with the proviso that the Latin, French or German of previous years be made up. If no such certificate is presented the students will be admitted on examination of the work of the previous year. No student will be allowed to graduate who has not studied at least one full year at the Institution. No students in the regular course can pass into the work of the succeeding year without having sustained the examination. The minimum mark for passing in any given study is fifty. No regular student will be allowed to devote time to extra subjects who does not maintain a rank of at least seventy-five in each required study.
