- Aldrich, Thomas Bailey. [1836-.]
A New England poet, novelist and writer of tales. His short stories are among the best in the English language. Each episode is complete, ingeniously developed and generally ended with a surprise, which is however a logical inference from incident and character. His power for sketching a single incident is greater than for sustained narrative, and his novels are therefore more noticeable for brilliant episodes than for continuous interest. 813.44.

- Allen, James Lane.
A Kentuckian story writer of rare merit, whose stories, local though they are in scene, are excellent in plot, construction and style. His diction is always refined and polished, and altogether his work may be characterized as admirable, and is worthy of even wider acceptance than it has found. His reputation was made by his descriptive work, "The Blue grass Region of Kentucky." 813.49.

- Arblay, Mme. Frances (Burney) d'. [1752-1840.]
English 18th century novelist. She modelled her style and manner on the famous contemporary realistic novelists, Richardson and Fielding, though less sentimental and more humorous than the former, and not comparable with the latter for force and versatility. She confined herself to delineations of small groups in their social relations, and may be said to have invented the domestic and society novel. She observed keenly, had original insight, much ironical humor and a strong sense for comedy. At twenty-six she sprang from obscurity to fame, became the pet of London society, and for over half a century remained a conspicuous figure in both literary and fashionable circles. 823.66.
- EVELINA. N. Y., Macmillan, 2 vols., $2.
The author's first and best book. The theme is the annoyance caused by vulgar relations to a fashionable young lady, noble on one side of the house. Some of the situations are admirably comic and the characters, though now appearing a little formal, survive very fairly the wear and tear of a century. Contemporary society pronounced this representation of itself delightful and its verdict has been accepted by posterity, which also accepts Miss Burney as the first of English women worthy to sit among the classics.
- CÉCILIA. N. Y., Macmillan, 2 vols., $2.
- Argles, Mrs. Margaret (H.). See Hungerford, Mrs. Margaret (Hamilton).
- Aristocracy: an anonymous novel. N. Y., Appleton, paper, 50 c.
Was written as a satire upon the many flattering pictures of society now offered the public. The characters are said to be well-known people. "Aristocracy" delineates stupid and wicked men and women. It depicts barely one decent character, and the panorama of English life is, to say the least, depressing. The style is very pointed, but the novel, while entertaining, must be said to be essentially false and unsatisfactory. 823.89.
- Atherton, Mrs. Gertrude Franklin.
A Western novelist who has specially sketched California life. About ten years ago she had decided, but short-lived popularity. Her stories are romantic and interesting, but are imperfect in form and careless in style. 813.46.
- BEFORE THE GRINGO CAME. N. Y., J. Selwin Tait, $1; paper, 50 c.

- WHAT DREAMS MAY COME. Chic., Belford, Clarke, $1; paper, 50 c.
- Austen, Jane. [1775-1817.]
English novelist of domestic and social life in the early days of the 19th century. The first of the three great English women in fiction and, as an artist in letters, more finished than either Charlotte Brontë or George Eliot. The only notable predecessor in her sphere was Frances Burney, the author of "Evelina." Miss Austen's novels reproduce with singular vividness and detail the minds and manners of her period and locality. She clung closely to what she knew and saw, or divined from observation. A great world, a
