Dear Mr. King,

I propose to publish "The Dominant" in April in the Community Magazine.
It will be an elaborate study: what I said in Ottawa was merely a summary. I am quite sure some means can be easily devised to give it a wider circulation than amongst the usual readers.
When next you are in Montreal I hope you will inform me. There are many wise men who would like to talk with you. There is a conservative principle and a liberal principle, both of which are precious. It is by the pull and play of these principles that we have created our institutions, which are the best in the world.

It is only by getting back into our respective lines that we can maintain these institutions.
I am now alone saying that the Conservatives betrayed their principle when they called themselves liberal. Conservatives are shackled themselves to an economic theory; and that the liberals betrayed theirs when they stood by conservatism.
Our whole industrial system is coming down, and we can only build anew upon
