Doan's Kidney Pills

Cured After Other Remedies Had Failed.

These Wonderful Kidney Pills will Cure the Most Obstinate Cases of Kidney Trouble if Only Given a Fair Trial and Used According to Directions.

Read what Mrs. Geo. H. Alward, Whites Point, N.B., has to say about them: "This is to certify that I have used Doan's Kidney Pills for pain in the back and kidney trouble and I do most gratefully recommend them to any person suffering in this way. I was so bad with kidney trouble that I could not get around the house. My feet and ankles were so swollen and painful that I could get no rest day or night. I tried several remedies but could get no relief whatever until a friend advised me to try Doan's Kidney Pills. I soon perceived a decided change for the better and had only taken two boxes when I was able to do my housework again, and three boxes made a complete cure."

BERNIER PEGGING AWAY.

Canadian North Pole Enthusiast Gradually Getting More Ground for Hope for His Great Scheme.

Capt. Bernier, who undertakes to discover the Pole for $120,000, has pervaded the Parliament Buildings ever since the session opened at Ottawa. Last session the captain left Ottawa with a sort of understanding that if he collected $60,000 the Government of Canada would see that he got $60,000 more from the public purse. The members of the that he got $60,000 more from the public purse. The members of the Government were not displeased with the pluck and persistency of the cheering little captainiand they figured it out that $60,000 was, after all, a small sum to give a man who might never some back to ask for more. It is not every promoter that will let a Government off for $60,000. Capt. Bernier was greatly heartened by the implied promise, and set out to do missionary work all over Canada. The astronomical societies and the scientific institutions took a splendid abstract intertions took a splendid abstract interest in his theories of Arctic navigation, nodded their heads wisely, and agreed that Bernier's plans were agreed that Berner's plans were quite feasible. But beyond a moral support they refused to go. The hard cash did not roll in, and all the captain's hard work and tremendous enthusiasm accomplished in a year's time was to raise about $20,000, and that mostly in small subscrip-tions.

Although he pointed out to many wealthy, influential persons that Ca-nada had the best right to the North Pole, as being nearest to it, and that a Canadian should have the honor of discovering what has stood for the Golden Fleece to many genretains of intrepid navigators—al-though, in short, the captain used all his atts of earnestness and argu-ment, he found the millionaires her-metically sealed to his adventurous proposition.

Mars Hopeful Than Ever. More Hopeful Than Ever.

This session he comes back to the House of Commons, with $20,000 worth more hope than he had last year. He will not solicit subscriptions any longer. He will solicit influence. He buttonholes members of Parliament. He seeks interviews with members of the Cabinet. He has converted the Minister of Marine and Fisheries who is a Frenchman. and Fisheries, who is a Frenchman, like himself, and who has ambitions, as everyloody knows, to enlarge the scope of his department. The Minister of Marine listens very kindly to Capt. Bernier's deputation, and hints that the captain's dearest wish may be gratified. The captain is so jolly, so patient withal, that nobody finds him a bore. He has abandoned the so patient withal, that nobody finds him a bore. He has abandoned the silk hat as unsuited to Arctic work, and he now appears in a soft hat, brown and jaunty. He goes about on the coldest days without overcoat or gloves. He expands his chest. He glows with warmth. He who runs may read that here is a man who will find Arctic regions as tolerable as tropic suns. It is a matter of regret that March was not colder, so that all could see how he stands it. A waggish American who saw him rushing about in light marching order said to him: 'Bernier, if they saw you in my country going round without an overcoat in this weather, they'd think that you meant it, and send you to the Pole."

"Ah," said the aptain, "if they would only believe here I'd do without a waistooat!"

Making an Impression.

Making an Impression.

And gradually Parliament is coming to believe. This hardy little sailor, who doesn't make more of a zero day than you or I do of the first of July, begins to impress the House of Commons as being sincere and reasonable. No jey heart repels him. No frosty face sets him back. The members say, "If he freezes to us this way, how much harder he will freeze to the North Pole." The earnestness of this ruddy little sea captain to discover something that hasn't six per cent. on the face of it suggests to the most practical that fame is better than money, and that some men burn to carry out the brave dreams that most of us forget with our boyhood's toys. It is understood that Sir Wilfrid Laurier favors the plans of his jovial company. And gradually Parliament is comderstood that Sir Wilfrid Laurier favors the plans of his jovial compariot. Capt. Bernier's dash for the Pole will come up in the House of Commons, and the probabilities are that Canada will invite her soul for the nonce by handing the captain a hundred thousand dollars and a God-speed. Then the captain will have the ship built in British Columbia, taking care to have it double trussed with green heart. And after that he will provision it with tins of pea soup and man it with good French-Canadians, chosen from the famous crew of the "Julie Plante."—H. F. G., a Toronto Star.

Two Davin Stories

"The honorable member for Assin-fiboia (Mr. Bavin) seems to have rooms in his upper story to let." said an opponent in debate in the House.

"Yes," interrupted Davin. 'rooms to let, what they're not like yours. They're furnished."

Another Davin story. The debate was on the emergency rations—dog biscuits the Cyposition called 'em. Davin was insisting that the duty of the Minister of Militin was to have had the rations analyzed.

"Why." he asked in his rich Irish brogue, 'didn't he analoise them?"

At this stage in the argument entered a gallent gentleman, since relegated to private—life. He had been dining well.

"And what," asked this temerarious person, "would he analyze them for?" "Yes," interrupted Davin, "rooms

Davin looked at him with infinite contempt.

"Well," he said, "if I had to make the post-mawrtem on you, I'd analoize you for alcohol."

Bessie-Hasn't he proposed yet? Mabel lie wants to, but I won't let him ou see, I don't want to ac-cettin, but if I refuse him some o hot girl will get him,—Pirk-Me-Up.

The man on the stage who does the trick of escaping from firmly tied ropes, submits to the bonds with a smile. He knows he can get out of the ropes that are being knotted. Put the same man in the woods and let Indian captors bind him to a tree for torture and he would struggle to the last against the bonds.

When the stomach is diseased there are bonds being woven every hour about the organs dependent on the stomach—heart, lungs, liver, kidneys, etc. The folly of mankind is to passively submit to the fastening of these bonds with no effort to escape until the pain they cause arouses fear.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cures diseases of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition. It cures diseases of heart, liver, lungs, kidneys and other organs, when these diseases, as is often the case, have their origin in the diseased stomach.

"For a long time I was suffering and was hardly able to get about," writes Mr. Andrew J. Jennings. of Thomas, Tucker Co., W. Va., Box 194. "Was bothered with kidney trouble and my whole system was out of order; had no appetite. A friend of mine told me to try Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. I did so, and the first bottle restored my appetite. I took six bottles of 'Golden Medical Discovery' and some of the Pleasant Pellets' and feel like mew person."

MESSAGE ON AN EGG.

Led to Marriage of English nan With

In regard to the story which has been going the rounds of the papers lately, as to a Liverpool man findlately, as to a Liverpool man finding a message written upon an egg by the packer, a widow in Manitoba, whom he ultimately married, many true incidents of the same kind could be related, says The London Daily Chronicle. In 1889, a message was found in a barrel of apples that had come from New Zealand. In this message the packer of the fruit, a young woman, stated that her ancestors, whose names were given, came from Kent, and she asked the finder to ascertain if any of her name and family still remained in the county. As stated in the papers of the time, the finder was ed in the county. As stated in the papers of the time, the finder was able to give her full particulars as to surviving relatives. But Mr. Tewof Leeds, a member of a Yerkshire banking family, had at one time a collection of these "messages in merchandise," some of them being very tragical and being a survival of the days when peaceful traders were caught by Algerian pirates and sold into captivity and slavery. One such into captivity and slavery. One such caught by Algerian pirates and sold into captivity and slavery. One such message had been written in blood on a coarse canvas bag that had contained gum-arabic; another appeared as a sort of tatooed stain on a large cork that had fastened up a vessel containing attar-of-roses.

In England these messages are most common in the hat trade, the girls working at the huge factories near Manchester being fond of putting bits of paper in between the lining and the substance of felt hats. A few years back there was a sensational wedding, reported in the newspapers, at Guide Bridge, near Manchester, between the finder of one such message, a young Dalston cabinet-maker, and one of the mill-workers, who had put a tiny "gem" portrait of herself and her name and address inside the lining of a bowler. The girls who work in Cuban cigar factories are fond of sending these messages in merchandise out to the world, and the present writer saw one of these lately that had been found by a gentleman who got the cigar at the Carlton Club. A small needle had been placed in the cigar, and to this was attached, by a tiny thread, a thin strip of paper, on and to this was attached, by a tiny which was a message, in very good Spanish, addressed to the finder, and stating that the writer was young and beautiful, though poor.

There is love and there is justice Justice is for oneself; love is for

It never is polite to tell a man he is lacking ideas of his own creation.

APSLEY HOUSE.

Sale of Former Residence of the Duke

Wellington. The London Express says:— Ap-sley House is to be sold if no great objections are raised in certain quarters. The news will come as a sley House is to be sold in decrease objections are raised in certain quarters. The news will come as a shock to the many people who still believe that the famous house at Hyde Park Corner was presented to the great Duke of Wellington by the nation. As a matter of fact, the Iron Duke purchased Apsley House in 1820, when it was the residence of his elder brother, Marquis Wellesley, Originally a plain brick mansion, Apsley House was built about 1785-6 by the Adams for Henry Bathurst, Baron Apsley, Earl Bathurst, Baron Apsley, Earl Bathurst, Bathors and Lord Chancellor, who died in 1794. In 1828 the house was cased with Bath stone, and a gallery, a suite of rooms, and the present portico were added, at a cost, it was then stated, of £180,000. The house centains a wonderful picture gallery, where a of £130,000. The house centains a wonderful picture gallery, where a Waterloo banquet was held annually until 1852, and/which still contains precious works of art; a wonderful china room full of fine bronzes and interesting relics, of the great Duke, and a small, ill-lighted room, in which the famous general slept on a narrow bedstead. The late Duke of Wellington was very anxious to sell Apsley House some years ago, but Wellington was very anxious to sell Apsley House some years ago, but he met with opposition from an exalted quarter on the grounds that such a sale would be an indignity to a great name. As the present Duke represents the fourth generation, and no longer receives an annual grant, it is believed that no opposition will be made to the sale, so that before very long a "prince of finance" may be ensconced at the house which a foreigner once aptly described as "No. 1, London."

Pepe's Line Exemplified.

"A little knowledge is a dangerous thing," to use the popular misquotation of Pope's line, and so Stewart Arthur Williams has found it. Mr. Williams is an ingenious gentleman of fifty-six, who actually hit upon a new, and for a time successful, form of fraud. He was an attentive reader of that useful but somewhat dry publication, The London Gazette, and particularly of the advertisements emanating from executors for the creditors of the estates of deceased persons. Williams, when he saw a likely advertisement of the sort, would send in an account either for dentistry or for wine supplied. He would make the bogus account seemingly due to some well-known firm, to be paid to himself as accountant either at an address in Finsbury pavement or at Hounslow. Generally he get the sums he applied for, but at last he was tripped through having that dangerous thing only "a little knowledge." He knew a certain lady was dead and that she died wealthy, and this knowledge inspired him to send in a bill for tooth-stopping. What he did not know the lady's executors did, namely, that she had not had a tooth in her head for years. So his application led to inquiries, and these to his apparance at Middlesex Sessions the other day, where he received eighteen months' hard labor.

He Didn't Need to Be Told.

Sir Robert Ball, the English astronomer, recently was showing a visitor a double star through a telescope, and since his friend was not an expert, Sir Robert thought to improve the occasion by a word or two of information. "One of those stars goes round the other," was his remark.

"Yes I saw it," said the visitor. As a matter of fact, the star in question takes a little over 900 years to revolve around its fellow.
