

POULTRY.—Although poultry yards are seldom thought of much importance, yet, cleanliness and warmth will make a considerable difference in their flavor and product; and, if it be possible so to construct their house as to let it have the benefit of a flue from the kitchen chimney, they will greatly profit by it. In this manner, vast quantities of that delicate bird, the turkey, are reared without any peculiar attention to its food, but merely by allowing it the warmth of a roost in the chimney.
