GOSSIP.

General "Phil" Sheridan was once asked at what incident he laughed the most.

"Well, I always laugh when I think of the Irishman and the army mule. 1 was riding down the line one day when I saw an Irishman mounted on a mule, which was kicking, and at last got its hoof caught in the stirrup, when I heard the Irishman say :

" Well, begorra, if you're goin' to get up, on yourself, I'll get off! "

One of the best tributes to the singlejudge system we have seen is the testimony of an English writer on the judging at the late Smithfield Show, at London, England, where single judges officiated. He says: "The show was opened on Monday morning, and the judging of 364 cattle, 199 pens of sheep and 82 pens of pigs was completed by three in the afternoon of the same day, every ribbon having been tied, even to the championships, and the winners could be inspected in their order as they stood in the arena, their entry numbers displayed corresponding with the catalogue."

IMPROVED MOLASSES CATTLE FOOD is the name given to a new stock food, or rather a food newly introduced in this country by the Dresden Sugar Company, at Dresden, Ont., and advertised on another page in this issue. This food, which is sold at a price per ton about equal to that of bran at the present time, and would seem to be well worthy of a trial by stockmen. It consists of sugar-beet pulp, so pressed as to exclude surplus moisture, and run into drying kilns or cylinders, where it is evaporated by being subjected to a high egree of heat, while being constantly agitated. During this process, waste molasses from the sugar factory is mixed with the pulp, and the nutritive value increased to more than that of plain pulp. The finished article comes out in the form of flakes, perfectly dry, and somewhat resembling a coarse quality of tea, which keeps perfectly in any quantity, and is in suitable form for shipping safely any distance, and for mixing with any other sort of food, such as bran, meal, chaff or cut hay. It is claimed for this food, and apparently with good reason, that it is palatable, promotes digestion, helps to assimilate other food, saves a large proportion of ordinary grain ration, regulates the bowels, is fattening and increases the flow of milk. Testimonials from Michigan farmers and feeders, where the food has been used, are exceedingly favorable. A prominent stockman, who has used it, recommends four pounds of this as a good daily ration for a cow or steer, and a third of a pound for a sheep, mixed with ordinary foods. We take pleasure in directing the attention of stockmen to the advertisement of this food, and will be pleased to hear from those who give it a fair trial. Dried beet pulp, we believe, has for years been satisfactorily fed in Germany and other European countries; and in England, molasses is largely used by cattle feeders with the most gratifying results, and as in the Dresden food both these commodities are combined, its nutritive value as a food would seem to be well
