Color-Sergt. Max Fraser Says There is no Foundation for Statement that Colonials Were Ill-Treated.

Maple City Soldier Gives his Impressions of old London-Reviewed by Queen, Prince and Lord Roberts.

"Yes, I am back from my trip and m hard at' work again," was Color Sergt. Max Fraser's hearty greeting to The Planet this morning.

"Did I have a good time?" he continued, "well I have had nothing else since_I left Chatham. If I could only spend seven weeks' holidays every summer like I have this year would be right in town. I had a far more enjoyable time than I really expected; I didn't think a crowd of fellows could be treated as well. I have heard a lot of talk in the papers since I came back about the poor treatment we received in England, but it is all news to me. I don't know where they could have got their information. For myself I cannot say too much about the good treatment we received. "We had a good passage going over. We just had one rough day, but we didn't mind that. The Governor-General went over with us and we were certainly a jolly crowd. We had concerts every night on board ship and we had the Governor presiding at every one of them.

"We were two weeks in London and there was something doing every day we were there. The people there fairly outdid themelves in their efforts to afford amusement for us. I do believe we saw everything there was to see in London. We camped at Was to see in London. We camped at Alexandra Palace, and were furnished with iron beds with sheets and blankets. We had our mess in the palace building. We were inspected at different times by the Prince of Wales. things in Chatham. "The only day we were out of London was when we visited the fleet at Spithead. The authorities chartered two liners for us and took all the colonial troops through the fleet.

It was a great sight. The only person I saw there from Canada was Mr. Linley, of Harwich. He was over the coronation and came up about seven or eight yards from where to see the coronation and came up and struck Mr. O'Rourke just over the eye. Dr. Garnet Holmes, Jr., dressed the wound. "We had a large number of photographs taken. One was taken of the Canadian arch with the colonial troops lined up in front of it, the officers at their head. Sir Wilfrid Laurier was sitting at the time in one of the balconies. I happened to be in the front row of the soldiers lice court clerk, or somebody she and plainly distinguished in the pichim just when his hired man was sick and work was pressing heavy. "We had a bad voyage coming back. It was cold, fogy and rainy throughout the whole trip. We just had two nice days out of the nine.

ONE OBJECTION

Walter Scane is a humorist cor scious or unconscious, is not exactly known. It is said that Dooley tried to coax Walter to make up sayings for him, but on the refusal of the Chatham lawyer, secured Dunne for the job. Dunne is doing pretty near as good as Mr. Scane could have done Walter has a good story now which he tells as his own.

"You know," said Mr. Scane, "that farm labor just now is very scarce and farmers can no longer get a man to work for his board and wages. He to work for his board and wages. He now wants the farm. Well, a friend of mine had a colored man working for him. The hired man was a splendid worker, and the farmer was happy and prided himself on his good luck. The other day the hired man wanted to quit. He said he had no complaint against the board. It was was of the best. His wages were good, and he liked his wor kand the people. There was one thing, however, he couldn't stand. He said that the farmer's wife had some kind of bird that sat up on the barn and every morning, when the the barn and every morning, when the colored man went out to his work the bird said "Look-at-the-Coon,"
