IMPRACHMENT OF LORD STRATFORD.

In another fortnight Parliament will meet after a recess crowded with momen incidents. It will be the lot of the Legislature to discuss the past and future camor failure, to suggest rewards for eminent services, or to demand inquiry into alleged neglects. In such circumstances we can no longer delay mention of a subject which es the minds of those conversant with Eastern affairs. We have before alluded to the transactions connected with the siege of Kars, and to the comments made on the conduct of Lord Stratford de RedHe accordingly wrote to Lord Stratford, simply showed their good sense. The means cliffe, the British Ambassador at Constantinople. The great calamity which has befallen the Turkish arms has given to necessity of action. The fact which we could be no room for the display of valor. cliffe, the British Ambassador at Constanthese events a vast importance, and we should but ill perfom our duty if we concealed the fact that the neglect and abandonment of the British officers and the troops they so ably led, are spoken of and are attributed by persons well informed on the matter to personal feeling on the part of the Ambassador towards the English were sent by the British Commissioner, and on the poop-deck, manœuvered the Chambassador towards the English were sent by the British Commissioner, and on the poop-deck, manœuvered the Chambassador towards the English were sent by the British Commissioner, and on the poop-deck, manœuvered the Chambassador towards the English were sent by the British Commissioner, and on the poop-deck, manœuvered the Chambassador towards the English were sent by the British Commissioner, and on the poop-deck manœuvered the Chambassador towards the English were sent by the British Commissioner, and on the poop-deck manœuvered the Chambassador towards the English were sent by the British Commissioner, and on the poop-deck manœuvered the Chambassador towards the English were sent by the British Commissioner, and on the poop-deck manœuvered the Chambassador towards the English were sent by the British Commissioner and the English were sent by the British Commissioner and the English were sent by the British Commissioner and the English were sent by the British Commissioner and the English were sent by the British Commissioner and the English were sent by the British Commissioner and the English were sent by the British Commissioner and the English were sent by the British Commissioner and the English were sent by the British Commissioner and the English were sent by the British Commissioner and the English were sent by the British Commissioner and the English were sent by the British Commissioner and the English were sent by the British Commissioner and the English were sent by the British Commissioner and the English were sent by the British Commissioner and the English were sent by the British Commissioner and the English were sent by the British Commissioner and the English were sent by the British Commissioner and the English were sent by the British Commissioner and the English were sent by the British Commissioner and the English were sent by the General whose name is now so well known in connexion with a long defence of the place. The matter is notorious to all acquainted with the Turkish capital, and not entirely unknown to the world in general, although the formalities of political discussion have generally precluded any allusion to it in Parliament or the press.

It may be said, then, that it is the misfortune of Lord Stratford to live in a state of dissension with almost every man with whom he is brought into contact. Although his age and position are sufficient to insure due respect, and those who approach him have no wish to be on other than amicable terms, yet few can hope long to escape some outbreak of his violent and groundless illwill. He lives in an atmosphere of antipathies, and, accustomed during so many years to intercourse with Turkish officials and to the deference of Levantine society. he is impatient of any demur to what he conceives his authority. The disregard of his advice, or even the differing from his opinion, is enough to kindle a dislike which opinion, is enough to kindle a dislike which cities of Armenia, and took his stand at taken from the Chinese, they would soon, on approaching nearer to get a better view may last for years. Such is the man to whom the British Government has commit ted the care of its interests in the East Turkish ways are not as our ways, and a minister at home must naturally leave all dealings with this unknown world to the entative and his staff of Orientalists and dragomans. A British ambassador ceived a piastre for three years when the whatever they are taught, and retain it in can by a word enforce attention to a request of his Government, or mark it out for neglect. "I am to lay this communication before you—do not ask my opinion of it, decide for yourselves" is sufficient to were much cast down and discontented as before you—do not ask my opinion of it, decide for yourselves?" is sufficient to ensure the rejection or evasion of a demand even though it emanated from the Foreigntoner to be. But when Mouravieff surrounded office itself, for the Porte will fancy that it office itself, for the Porte will fancy that it the place the energies of both Englishmen office itself, for the Porte will fancy that it the place the energies of both Englishmen precious in soldiers, and which can scarcely and another than the place the energies of both Englishmen precious in soldiers, and which can scarcely and another than the place the energies of both Englishmen precious in soldiers, and which can scarcely and provide another than the first the place the energies of both Englishmen precious in soldiers, and which can scarcely and provide another than the first the place the energies of both Englishmen precious in soldiers, and which can scarcely and which power of the country he represents must be wielded personally by a represen-tative in the East. Now, the statements to which we wish to call attention are as formerly employed on the Turco-Persian human nature. If anything, bowever, Boundary Commission, and had some ac-Boundary Commission, and had some accould add to their indignation, it would be quaintance with the people and language to find that after the place was invested, of Asiatic Turkey, was in 1854 selected as after the defence had begun to enlist the British Commissioner to the Ottoman army sympathies and rouse the admiration of the in Armenia. The Turks had been defeated in five battles, and their force was completely disorganised. It was thought that the experience of General Williams for the unfortunate General and his Staff, might be of service in the reconstitution of the their force was distinguished chiefly. But we have said enough, provinces. He was distinguished chiefly An inquiry into these things must take. the triny and the defence of the threatened provinces. He was distinguished chiefly by a quiet unassuming disposition, so much to that few of his friends, gave his the autumn of 1854 will, and the displayed at the defence, and government of Kara. It is difficult, therefore, to constant exertions of the Ambassador's alteged dislike except the that General Williams received his spontanes the representations of Lord Stratford. But this distingtions of Lord Stratford and the proposed retaliation. One thing is clear—that he would in no other than the stant of their lives on the sent than the interior, and the province ince the natural of their lives on the sent than the province of the stant of their lives on the sent than the province of the province of the province of the stant of their lives on the sent than the province of the ween in the most formal manner. General Williams had to go up to the seat of war unrecommended and unaccredited by the representative of his country. With men like the Turkish commanders this was a sufficient hint, and the General's difficulties were no doubt vastly increased. How way assist the new British Con ties were no doubt vastly increased. How-ever, he applied himself to his task, took note of deficiencies, saw how corruption down, and fled as a flock of steep might do and cowardice had worked, and was soon if a bomb should burst in the midst of them intent on a thorough reform. His official and it was thence inferred that the Chinese position was strictly only that of an adviser; were essentially cowardly, deficient in the could do nothing but by the Turkish Government, and his only instrument must judgment appears to us very hasty. In shall now state is almost incredible, but we On one side arrows and matchlocks, on the stood staunchly by him. That these brave men should feel no pang of resentment towards him whose causeless animosity they believe to have been their ruin, would believe that it is true beyond a doubt. The ambassador would hold no communication with grape. When a maritime town was to with General Williams. He would not be destroyed, it was the simplest thing in is just possible some one or other of my answer, he would not acknowledge the the world. An English frigate had only to readers may not have heard, which is, that receipt of a single despatch. It is said heave-to at the proper distance, and then, none of them have ever attained to any emito not one of these would the ambassador pagne and the Madeira, the sailors metho- perior understanding, who has united within reply. He would have nothing to do with dically bombarded the town, that, with its the most pressing wants was that of amounition. General Williams wrote, it is said, repeatedly on this subject, but did not receive any answer, and nothing was done. repeatedly on this subject, but did not tumbling down on all sides as if struck by receive any answer, and nothing was done. lightning. The English artitlery was for When Kars surrendered there was only these poor people so terrible, so supernaturally these poor people so terrible, so supernaturally scanty notion of the excitement derived from the high interests of party, and the great though it had to sustain no regular siege. This fact was successfully concealed from How could they be expected to be brave in the Russians, or it might have saved them so unequal a contest? An enemy whom and kingdoms for counters. In this grand a long and wearisome blockade. At last, they had no means of reaching, was blazing we believe, General Williams made a away at them quite at his case; what could complaint to the Foreign-office, which in they do but run away? They did so, and turn directed Lord Stratford's attention to in our opinion they showed their wisdom in the matter, and requested him no longer to neglect the representations of the commissional blame, for driving thousands of men almost sioner. Lord Stratford ungraciously obey- unarmed and defenceless to a certain and ed, corresponded formally with General useless death. The English are decidedly Williams, but the requests of the latter very brave, but if ever, which God forbid, man of Amberly was journeying homeward were to the last ineffectual.

submissive and obedient. and they would be continued, now quite aware of his situa-rally and physically; they seem capable of other managed to help him out. " meeting every demand; and with respect to you are pricked like a pincushion," over enormous wayes that threatened every moment to swallow them. The Chinese would very soon be able to build vessels on the model of those of Europe, and a few years would enable them to put to sea with such a fleet as has never been seen. s that threatened every such a fleet as has never been seen.

What China wants is a man of genius, a man truly great, capable of assimilating the power and vitality of this nation, more populous than all Europe, and which counts fore than thirty centuries of civilization of the West, we believe that the work of regeneration would proceed with rapid strides, and that perhaps those Chinese who now appear such a very ridiculous people, might

Sir. passed chased double ly exp the Acout, b found Public truste far fr ceptic aston tions relati which as au bruai

news it is made the l

strui —Al

of P

refe

Compart who pers gall poor the allo

par blas res S Hos the Feb tru

DIPLOMACY OF WOMEN,-There is a trait in the lives of great diplomatists of which it herself great talents for society with a high role women perform no ignoble part; may, it were not too much to say that theirs is the very motive-power of the whole vast machinery.—Dublin University Magazine.

A THORNY COUCH.-One morning last week (says a Gloucester paper,) as a young Kars, the frontier fortress of the province. we are convinced, find some of their valor of the apparition, he found a semi-naked man euchemise d'homme—kicking and wri-Men, provisions, ammunition, were alike deficient,—the troops were in a miserable condition. One of the matters urged on the Ambassador by General Williams was a payment, at least in part, of the arrears world. The Chinese are intelligent, inge-dear," responded the helpless fellow in the payment, at least in part, of the arrears world. They comprehend a payment, at least in part, of the arrears world. They comprehend a payment in the helpless fellow in the province of their valor of the apparation, he found a semi-naked man euchemise d'homme—kicking and wridering about to extricate himself from his in China all the elements necessary for orthogonal through the payment of the arrears world. They comprehend a payment in the helpless fellow in the payment of the arrears when the province of the apparation, he found a semi-naked man euchemise d'homme—kicking and wridering about to extricate himself from his in China all the elements necessary for orthogonal through the payment of the apparation, he found a semi-naked man euchemise d'homme—kicking and wridering about to extricate himself from his in China all the elements necessary for orthogonal through the payment of the apparation, he found a semi-naked man euchemise d'homme—kicking and wridering about to extricate himself from his in China all the elements necessary for orthogonal through the payment of the apparation, he found a semi-naked man euchemise d'homme—kicking and wridering about to extricate himself from his in China all the elements necessary for orthogonal through the payment of the payment of the payment of the apparation. The china all the elements necessary for orthogonal through the payment of the payment o a payment, at least in part, of the arrears world. The Chinese are intelligent, ingeligent, ingeligent ceived a piastre for three years when the place fell, and their clothes were worn out their memory. They are persevering, and up." "Get up! no I should think not," long before their stomachs were pinched exert themselves, respectful to authority, down?" Oh, help I out. Why, you see," tion under the influence of the north wind, "I had a drop o' drink last night, and I made sure I was safe at home here, so I did strip, and got into bed. But darn me if I like such a bed at all. I be tarnedly prickdream all sorts o' knives and vorks were how they will bear hunger, thirst, heat, dream all sorts o'knives and vorks were cold, the difficulties and fatigues of a long driving into me, and I did shiver awful.

Darn me, I be glad I be out of it," as the numbers, they might be enrolled by mil-lions.

The equipment of this immense army ject. "What a thing a drap o' drink be, would also be no very hard matter. There