LONDON, April 5.

The Governor, Newfoundland:
The Russian Government reports its offensive in the Carpathians to be developing with success. On Thursday the Russians captured 100 officers, over 7,000 men and 10 machine guns.

The Turkish cruiser Medusa was sunk by a mine off Odessa.
The Foreign Office understands that on the whole, there have been great improvements at Rubleben Camp during the last week.

HARCOURT.

"ON TO BUDAPEST."

PETROGRAD, April 5.

With Russian forces holding the Beskid and the Anaparn forces in retreat southwards, the mighty forces of the Czar are being hurled at the defences of Uzok Pass to-day to clear away the last obstacle to a general advance in the plains of Hungary. Night and day Russian troops are assailing the Uzok position of their foes, and no rest is given to the Austro-German forces at this point. With its great resources in men, Russia is able to replace worried troops with fresh men. The Russian steam roller was never operating with greater force than in the battle raging just north of Uzok Pass. The War Office officials assert that it is not within the power of the Teuton troops to withstand the attacks they are undergoing from the corps massed along their front. "On to Budapest" will be the battle cry of the Russian legions when Uzok Pass is captured.

AMERICAN NOTE TO BRITAIN.

WASHINGTON, April 5.
The United States Government to-day made public its note to Britain, announcing it "could not admit" either the right of the Allies or their claim for justification in placing an embargo on all commercial intercourse between Germany and neutral countries. "To admit it," says the communication, "would be to assume the attitude of unneutrality toward the present enemies of Britain, which would be obviously inconsistent with the solemn obligations of this Government in the present circumstances."

cumstances, and for Britain to make such a claim would be for her to abandon and set at naught the principles for which she has consistently and earnestly contended at other times and circumstances." The note reviews at length the legal phases of the blockade of belligerent territory and the virtual blockade of neutral coasts. In conclusion, the U. S. states that it is in expectation that Britain, after having considered "the possibilities of the serious interruption to American trade," under the order in Council, "will take the necessary steps to avoid them, and, in the event that they should unhappily occur, will be prepared to make full reparation for every act which, under international law, constitutes a violation of neutral rights." The American communication interprets the circumstances under which Great Britain claims to be justified in adopting retaliatory measures toward her enemies, as "merely a reason for certain extraordinary activities by her naval forces, and not an excuse for, or prelude to, any unlawful action." "If the course of the present enemies of Britain," the note adds, "should prove to be tainted by illegality and disregard of the principles of war sanctioned by enlightened nations, it cannot be supposed that this Government, for a moment, believe His Majesty's Government would wish the same taint to attach to their own action."

Ambassador Sharp, of Paris, was instructed to present a copy of the American note to Britain to the French Foreign Office, with a statement that although the French Admiralty decree had not been officially received at Washington, it was understood here to be identical with the British order in Council, and the American Government, therefore, made a similar reply.

ITALIAN STEAMER SUNK BY A GERMAN SUBMARINE.

GENOA, Italy, April 5.
News was received here to-day that a German submarine had sunk the Italian steamer Laifi Paradi. She left Baltimore on January 22nd, with a cargo of coal for Genoa. The report caused a profound impression here, and there are many expressions of resentment. Great excitement prevails, and the authorities have taken strong measures to protect the German colony and German shops from possible exactions or reprisals. Nothing is known of the fate of the crew, which was made up of Genoese.

LONDON, April 5.

Military authorities have instructed London hospitals to extend their accommodation for wounded. It is expected that half a million beds will be added by next month. Total prohibition is not expected, although it is possible that the sale of spirits will be prohibited altogether.

Nurse Parsons

Entertained.

Last night at the General Hospital Miss Maise Parsons, who leaves by this evening's express en route to Montreal when she will proceed to the front as a Red Cross nurse, was entertained by her associates of the institution. Dr. L. E. Keegan, resident physician, the members of the medical and surgical staff, Miss P. F. Moore and many other friends were present.

A wrist watch, the gift of the medical staff, and a suit case, the gift of the nurses, was presented to Miss Parsons by Dr. Keegan, who in doing so, paid a high tribute to her ability as a nurse and her qualifications for the work which she is about to undertake. Several others of these presents spoke also in congratulatory terms, and endorsed all that Dr. Keegan had said.

During the evening refreshments were served after which dancing was indulged in until midnight, when the gathering dispersed, all wishing Nurse Parsons every success in the noble work she has undertaken.

Judgments Built on Sand.

RUTH CAMERON.

"And that poor man was so sound asleep, so drowsily tired," concluded Molly, star-eyed, "that the conductor could hardly wake him up."
She had been telling us the sad tale of the poor sick looking man on the seat in front of her on the train who had evidently come through without a sleeper because he just dropped his head forward on the window sill and slept.

"Silly," said the author's wife.

"Of course he was drunk. That's what makes people go to sleep like that."

"He was not," said Molly, the wistful stars in her eyes changing to blazing suns of wrath.

The laugh that is more cutting than words.

The author's wife laughed the scornful laugh that is a more cutting answer than any argument.
And as I listened my mind flew back to an occasion years ago when, as a newspaper woman, I was suddenly sent out on an assignment, to a city some hundreds of miles away in the late afternoon. I worked on my story until eleven and wrote until two. I had to be up at six the next morning to catch the train back to the office. I could not get a parlor seat and I slept all the way back with my head pillowed on my arm. "Doubtless," I now reflected as I saw myself for the first time in the light of the author's wife's positive judgment, "doubtless all the passengers in the train thought of course I was drunk."

At least half the injustice of the world is not deliberate. It is simply careless. It is the injustice of judgment founded on the basis of prejudice and semi-truths.

People who are asleep on the train are sometimes under the weather. Therefore anyone who is seen asleep on the train is to be adjudged in that condition.

An Injustice That I Always Resented.

As a child nothing made me more indignant than this form of reproach: "How did you break such, and such a thing?"

"I didn't break it."

"But it's broken."

True, I was an impetuous young person and frequently did break things but I did not think that was a fair premise on which to base the judgment that anything broken around the house was my doing.

We were talking about canned goods the other day. I am a great believer in a reasonable use of good canned things because they are usually cooked by first class cooks and because they save so much time.

The woman with whom I was talking doesn't believe in them. "My dear," she said, "they're not nourishing."

"What makes you think so?" said I.

The Reason Why She Knew.

"I know so," she answered. "Why, I know two young stenographers who kept a little apartment and they ate almost nothing but canned goods and one of them broke down."

The fact that the girls were trying to work at an office and at the same time keep house, and the possibility that other factors, such as mental troubles, lack of fresh air and exercise might have affected the girls' health apparently never occurred to this woman. Yet she is a woman much above the average in brain and heart.

It is a very common failing indeed, this habit of basing one's judgments on semi-truths and prejudices, but remember they are a very wobbly foundation and the judgments built upon them are about as dependable and valuable as the house built on sand.

Telegram to Pope Stopped.

German Authorities Insist Poles Express Loyalty to Kaiser.

Rome, March 29.—Fifteen Polish members of the Prussian Diet tried to send a telegram to the Pope thanking him for his expression of sympathy and sorrow over the death of the Archbishop of Posen, expressing loyalty to the Holy See and declaring that the Polish nation treasures above all else the Pope's sincere affection.

The telegram was stopped by the German military authorities because it omitted to make any reference to the war and the loyalty of the Poles to Germany. Herr Mierski declared that he and his fellow members of Parliament had the right to exclude politics from religious matters. He entrusted a copy to an Italian priest coming to Rome, who delivered it to the Pope.

The attack on the "Gauterne" in October, 1914, is proof that there is no such thing as a free lunch, even the bluff, in the man submarine blockades. English and French ships were in use long before the declaration of the war.

Here is the official French Government report followed by shipwreck of French steamer "Amir" was a victim and with loss of many lives.

After having caused inquiry to be made by the authorities, the Government Republic has the honor to inform the Powers of the fact.

On the 26th October, French steamer "Amir" of 5,489 tons, belonging to Chargeurs-Reunis Co., left 2 p.m. bound for La Palmyre taken on board 2,500 both sexes, fleeing from hostilities. Suddenly, the vessel being 43 miles west of Cape Gris-Nez, a violent explosion on the side between the engine and the boiler room, the boiler exploded and No. 2 hold. Thirty and refugees were killed, explosion and it is only prompt assistance, rapidly such frequented waters, greater part of those who were recovered, sufficient to immediately inspect.

From the inspection, an inquiry held, it was shown that the "Gauterne" had been attacked by a German submarine. On the one hand, the steamer "Amir" and the "Gauterne" saw the other hand pieces of the ship were recovered, sufficient to immediately inspect.
