Wonderful Wireless.

France will shortly possess the most powerful wireless station in the world. It is at Croix d'Hines, near Bordeaux, and has four masts, each to carry aerials. These masts will measure 275 metres high (1 metre equals about 40 in.) that is to say, 25 metres less than the Eiffel Tower in Paris. The new station will be able to communicate direct by wireless with Washington to the West and China to the East.

COUNCIL MEETING.—The Council holds its weekly meeting at 6 o'clock this afternoon.

One Hundred Years Old

AND FIT AS A FIDDLE.

Alexander Baptiste, of St. Louis, Mo., celebrated his hundredth birthday the other day by knocking off work a little earlier than usual to attend a dinner which was given at noon in his honor.

Baptiste is not quite as fit as he was on his eighty-eighth birthday, when he wrestled and threw his son George, then recognized as one of the best men in St. Louis, but at one hundred he is vigorously healthy. He still appears at his place of business, coming twelve miles from his residence on a street car, not infrequently meeting the fate of other street-car travelers and being compelled to stand in the aisles.

His handiwork is crushing. His hair is a mass of it, is hardly touched with grey. His moustache is wholly black. His skin has a healthy glow. "Ho, ho," said his son, who is fifty-four and whom he addresses as "my little boy," as he picked up a newspaper, "I see the Kaiser."

"Let's see," exclaimed the father, and he removed his glasses to read the despatches. He explained that he used his glasses only for distance. "I'm glad of that," he said. "I'm glad to live to see that murderer go." His eye fell upon the account of what the influenza did.

"Pooh," he sniffed. "Grip; that's all! No man will get it if he takes care of himself. I am not afraid of it."

Baptiste has his recipe for longevity. "Drink no intoxicants. Go to bed as early as you can; get up as early as you can. Exercise before breakfast, and then a warm bath, tapering off to cold. Eat fresh food. Above all, shun bad company."

He says he expects the formula to at least carry him to the age his father reached—116. "I have never spent a day in my life in bed from sickness," he said. "I guess I'll die with my boots on."

An athlete all his life, and still taking his morning turn at the pulleys in his room, Baptiste says that his greatest feat was the lifting of 1,200 pounds.

Baptiste came to St. Louis sixty-nine years ago. His first employer here was Pierre Chouteau, who conducted a steamboat trade with the Indians. He was born in Athens, Greece.

A Women's Newspaper.

(From The New York World.)

The experiment of a daily newspaper edited, managed and printed entirely by women, has failed at Atlantic City, after an eight months' trial. This does not mean, of course, that women are incapable of editing and publishing a newspaper with success. All it proves is that it is not enough merely to furnish a journal to make it appeal to readers. A successful women's newspaper is quite as feasible as a successful men's bank or factory, but only on the same conditions, that it must be efficiently operated, and in the case of the newspaper must print the news with such art as to compel the people to read it, regardless of sex or of the fact that the editors and printers are women. No doubt there will some day be a great women's newspaper. The opportunity exists, there is a vast feminine constituency, and it would not be difficult to assemble a staff of competent women editors, reporters and managers. But a newspaper of the kind to gain circulation and influence would have to be conducted on the same lines as the great man-made newspapers and in competition with them. It would have to print the news and make its editorial opinion authoritative and adopt sound business methods of publication. All the failure of the Atlantic City experiment shows is that to publish a newspaper the essentials of newspaper success must be observed, and these have nothing to do with sex.

Returns What He Could Not Use.

The robbery of the East Side Bank, of Portland, Ore., by Arthur C. Davis, a twenty-year-old bank clerk, about November 1, broke into the limelight again recently when H. H. Newhall, president of the bank, announced that Davis had returned all the non-negotiable papers he had taken when he stole $18,500 in Liberty Bonds and cash.

The suitcase was shipped by express from Salt Lake City, Utah, affording the police the first clew to the whereabouts of young Davis since he made his escape after looting the bank in broad daylight. Newhall received a letter from Davis recently, telling of the clerk's intention to send back all the papers which were of no value to him. The letter was written on note paper of good quality and was enclosed in a dainty little envelope such as women use for personal correspondence. "Dear Mr. Newhall," the note read, "I am returning to you by express all the papers taken from your bank excepting such as are negotiable."

"A. C. DAVIS."

The suitcase arrived in due time, billed to R. Usher, another clerk at the bank. Mr. Usher and two private detectives went to the express office for it. The suitcase contained about twenty pounds of mortgages, notes and deeds, all recorded in the county records and of no use to any one but the proper owners. The package was taken to the bank and opened. The shipping receipt purported to have been written by Willis Ireland, cashier of the bank. Mr. Ireland had been in Portland ever since the robbery, so the writing was a patent forgery.

Davis' theft is one of the most sensational in local police annals. He visited the bank after daylight in the morning, filled an automobile with Liberty Bonds, sacks of gold and silver and currency and drove to his home, where he left $1,500 with his wife and then disappeared. He is a son of the Rev. C. Howard Davis of this city.

Roses as Rent.

King George is the recipient of many queer rents, which, if of no intrinsic value, are certainly curious. They are really surviving customs of feudal days.

The City of London's rent for certain property off the Strand consists of two knives, six horse-shoes, and sixty-one nails, and it is paid to the King's Remembrancer at the Law Courts.

The Royal Academy pays a peppercorn rent for the site of Burlington House.

The owner of Copeland Manor holds his tenancy on condition that he supports the King's head should the Sovereign be sequestered in crossing from Dover to Whitesand.

The Manor of Aylesbury is bound to provide the King with three geese if he goes there in summer, or with three eels if it is in the winter. It is also bound to provide clean straw for the King's bedroom three times a year should His Majesty pass through Aylesbury. This obligation dates from the time when straw was a luxury for the bedroom floor.

St. Olave's Grammar School, near Tower Bridge, is rented by roses. Originally the value of the land was £30. Its worth is now £5,000 a year, but the rent is still a bunch of roses.

The ancient city of Chichester is bound to provide the King with "a string for his cross-bow," whilst the lord of Brynston, in Dorset, used to hold his manor on condition that he provided a boy with a stringless bow and an unfeathered arrow whenever the King made war in Wales.

The tenant of Bradley Great Wood, near Grimsby, is compelled to send a wild boar or its equivalent in cash to the Mayor of Grimsby.

As wild boars are somewhat scarce nowadays the money is usually sent.

A carload of frozen lamb and mutton, one of several consigned to New York of a shipment from New Zealand, via Vancouver, has been placed on sale at a New York market. In wholesale lots the shipment is expected to sell several cents under American products. Heretofore England has been the principal market for New Zealand lamb and mutton.

Edgar Cramond, a prominent British financial writer, estimates the direct cost of the war to the Allies at $28,360,000,000 sterling, and to the Central European Powers at $13,675,000,000. He estimates the total cost of the war, including indirect losses, at $52,000,000,000.

Increased precautions have been taken to safeguard the Premiers and President Wilson in their daily conferences at Paris. So careful have the plans been made that not even the chiefs of the secret service squads are informed as to when the meetings will take place.

The old country doctors have decided to form the profession into a trades union affair. They say that this is the only way they can get justice. The organization of the new Ministry of Health has forced the doctors to get a move on. Dr. Stancomb (Southampton), asked: "How is it that the community can pay Charlie Chaplin £200,000 a year to make them laugh, and only pay me £800 a year to keep them alive?"

A Slight Mistake.

Concerning one of his earliest flights, Harry Hawker, the famous aviator who is expected to make an early dash across the Atlantic tells an amusing story. His height-recording barographs had been sent to a certain laboratory to be tested, and a few days later the secretary of the Aero Club telephoned to ask about them.

"What is the height recorded on those barographs?" he asked. "About one foot eight inches," was the reply. "What!" gasped the secretary. "I expect the height is nearer thirteen thousand feet."

"Who are you getting at?" demanded the voice. The secretary explained patiently: "I want to know the height recorded on the barographs sent to be tested." Oh, I don't know anything about barographs," came the answer. "I'm the gardener. I thought you said you wanted to know the record height for asparagus."

NURSERY HYGIENE.

The nursery is the most important room in the house; therefore its hygiene must be above suspicion. Many parents fall into a fallacy regarding modern heating methods, and while admitting the comfort, cleanliness and convenience of the Gas Fire, call its suitability for nursery use into question on the grounds of hygiene.

This idea is wrong. The modern Gas Fire is more hygienic than the coal fire, has all its good points without its bad ones. The Gas Fire gives radiant heat and assists ventilation. All the products of combustion are carried off by a direct connection to the chimney. There is no smoke, dust or ashes, and for a sick room it is invaluable.

The modern ventilated Gas Fire produces radiant heat, a natural heat similar to that given by the sun, and adds hygiene to its many other advantages.

For particulars of the new Radiant Fires, phone 97 or call at the Gas Co.'s Showroom. apr 10, 1919.

How Long Should We Sleep?

Sir James Crichton-Browne says that between the ages of twenty-one and twenty-seven we should sleep for nine hours out of the twenty-four. When we have passed this age, eight hours will suffice.

The old Duke of Wellington used to say that a man who could sleep more than five hours was a fool, whilst George R. Sims declares that in his young days two or three hours' sleep was all that he ever wanted. Lord Holdane is one who sleeps very little, and so is Sir Edward Carson.
