Simplicity Marks Daily Life of His Holiness.

WORKS TWO THIRDS OF THE DAY

ROME, (Associated Press).—The daily life of Pope Pius XI. at the Vatican is marked by simplicity, incessant work and regular exercise. He labors from 12 to 16 hours a day; sleeps from six to seven, and plays two hours. His meals are taken while he examines his mail or gives directions to his secretaries. His play consists of a vigorous military march seven or eight times around the Vatican gardens, making five or six miles and this he does rain or shine. His Holiness takes personal charge of the direction of the affairs of the church, assigning the routine to his secretaries. The diplomatic letters which attracted so much attention during the Genoa conference were the personal work of the Holy Father. He reads and gives into the rich collection of Vatican books assiduously. So insistent is he, sometimes, in seeking just the thought he wants that some of the prelates have been compelled to use a "gentle violence" in urging him, when the night has crept far on, to seek repose. His energy astonishes the papal household. Recently, when it was suggested to him that he was working far too hard, Pius XI replied: "You know that when one is made Pope, life is finished. All then is in the hands of God. I will do nothing to preserve my life one day more, but I will work until God says 'It is enough.'" The Pope rises at 6.30 o'clock every morning and says mass in his private chapel before breakfast, which is at 8 o'clock. This meal consists of coffee with milk, bread and butter. The mail is brought in while he eats, and the Pontiff divides it among his seven secretaries for attention and answers. At 9 o'clock, Cardinal Gasparri, Secretary of State, is received in the papal chamber every day except Tuesday and Friday. On Tuesday Monsignor Borgognini-Duca, the pro-Secretary for Extraordinary Ecclesiastical Affairs, is received, and on Friday Monsignor Pizzardo, the Substitute Secretary of State. One hour is assigned to each for the discussion of affairs.

THE DIURNAL ROUTINE.

At 10 o'clock the Pope commences his private audiences, receiving cardinals, bishops, prelates, high civil personages, diplomats and nobles. These conferences last until one o'clock, when the public audiences begin. For an hour the Holy Father receives pilgrims, associations and various organizations who come to Rome to pay homage to him. At 2 p.m. the Master of the Papal Household, Monsignor Caccia-Dominione, is received and places before His Holiness the list of audiences for the succeeding day and asks for their approval. The Pope lunches usually at 2.30. While he eats alone there are several of his secretaries present to receive orders and discuss matters particular to their charge. The Pontiff also has additional letters read to him and gives instructions for the replies. The meal is simple. His Holiness is a great lover of rice done in the Milan style. Then follow cutlets, or perhaps chicken, but the Pope is not exacting; he has never been known to refuse any dish placed before him. A few vegetables and some fruit complete the meal.

WALK NOT NEGLECTED.

A feature of the day which is never neglected is the walk. Promptly at 3.30 p.m. the Pope enters his carriage and is driven to the gardens. Here he walks five or six miles briskly. Even on this tramp there is work. His Holiness will have at his side some prelate with whom he wants to confer. He will go into full details of the matter in hand while walking and issue his instructions. At half-past five the Pontiff returns to the papal apartments. Audiences begin again and he receives cardinals, archbishops, and other prelates in private audience. These conferences are scheduled to end at 8.30 o'clock, but on occasions of importance they continue much later. Supper is served as a rule at 9 o'clock. This too, is very simple, consisting of only one or two dishes. After supper Pius XI goes to work again. At this hour he devotes himself to the composition of various Vatican communications, later going to the library to read and work. On one occasion recently he kept the library lights burning until one o'clock in the morning.

Latest Wireless Wonder.

Two super-wireless stations came into operation a short time ago, and recently a third, situated at Berna, in Switzerland, has been added. They send out their messages in Morse code at the amazing rate of 200 words a minute.

High-speed wireless can deal with a vast number of messages in a short time, and it is absolutely secret, for no one can read it without the complicated receiving machine. Messages are dealt with by making dots and dashes in a long strip of paper tape. The tape is then inserted into the transmitter which automatically sends out the signals recorded upon it. So great is the speed that the dots and dashes are blended into a continuous high note. The sound contains every dot and dash, but no human ear is capable of recognizing them.

At the receiving end is an instrument provided with a blank gramophone record revolving at enormous speed. Upon it a sharp point cuts a record of the messages received. The record is then placed in another machine, where it is revolved at one-fifth of its previous speed. The signals now become intelligible to the expert operator, who writes them down as he receives them.
