Jackson Running

to Form.

HAD A SPIN YESTERDAY. Yesterday afternoon Laurie Jackson and his trainer visited the Prince's Rink, when the Canadian sprinter covered five miles of the course. Taking into consideration that the track has a very short straight away stretch, and many corners to contend with throughout the hard grind, Jackson appeared to be quite at home. His running action and style was indeed beautiful to watch. He appears to run without the least effort, has a medium length stride with a quick leg action, while his arms in unison with the movement of his legs, makes him a finished runner. Jackson stated that the lay of the track could not be improved upon, while the sweep around the corners affords lots of room for an opponent to pass. He finished fresh, and is running in excellent
