Though the evening was exceptionally warm, there was a large turnout, and the affair was in every way successful. The patronesses were: Mrs. P. Collins, Mrs. T. W. Bryant, Mrs. T. J. Garbutt College Dinner On Wednesday evening the girls's cooking class, under the direction of Miss Hallett at Garbutt College, held a delightful little dinner to wind up the session. Among those present were Dr. and Mrs. Scott, Mr. Kidner, Mr. and Miss McDonald, Miss Elliott and Mrs. Bognell. The menu, which was excellent, was made up by the girls, a splendid sample of the good work done in the classes. After dinner a pearl pin, the gift of the girls, was presented to Miss Hallett's ability as an instructions, and complimented the girls on the interest they had displayed in the work and the success of their accom-plishments. Eight of the girls attend-ing these cooking classes were sent at the instigation of the Children's Aid. ing these cooking classes were sent at the instigation of the Children's Aid, who also paid their fees. Some of these girls, who are in domestic service, have been highly spoken of by their mistresses, who appreciate the difference in the cooking of the girls since attending Miss Hallett's classes. On their own showing the girls considered the classes as no task, but as omething not to be missed from an interesting and educative standpoint.

(By Constance Errol.)

Those women who worked for the extension of the franchise to women, and those others who consented to use the vete when they got it, should be most interested in the present discussion over the enlargement of the voters' list in matters municipal. The old charter which is now being revised, will not again be revised for a long number of years, and it is now and not leter in the women's movement here, that the women should find their place on the roll and take it, for the council here has much power and it is ruled by the people. If women are really interested in women's affairs and in the interested in women's affairs and in the literest of children. Then it is time number of years, and it is now and not leter in the women's movement here, that the women should find their place on the roll and take it, for the council here has much power and it is ruled by the people. If women are really interested in women's affairs and in the interests of children, then it is time that they had the courage of their convictions, and when a chance like this comes up they should grasp it with both hands. They are afraid, they say, if they interfere too much in the work at the city hall that the men there will become tired of seeing them, but do not they pay rent and taxes to the city, do not they fulfill the law's requirements just as the men do, and should not the mayor and other officials be as ready to act on their suggestion for amendments for the charter as on the suggestion of men? As a matter of fact, the mayor is most polite to ladies, and if they stood a little less in awe of his position they might get more out of him than they do. He feels that the female portion of the community is as valuable as the male portion, and if there are any barriers between the women's needs and their readjustments at the city hall, it would seem that the women are themselves to blame.

Once for all, will the women get rid of the idea that it is unladylike to vote and unnecessary? It is neither. As citizens they are responsible for the kind of men who are put in office, and as women, wives and mothers, they are as responsible for the civic lives of themselves, their children and their husbands as they are of their home life. Indeed, the home life rests on the civic life for does not the council say themselves, their children and their husbands as they are of their home life. Indeed, the home life rests on the civic life, for, does not the council say where we shall eat and drink, what taxes we shall pay, and even how often we shall empty our garbage cans?

To show their appreciation of the responsibility that the Creator has placed on them as reasonable human beings, and after that as women, let the fair sex take more interest in this, a vital issue for men and women
