The evidence developed the fact that the prisoner had engaged in systematic attempts to blackmail noblemen by writing letters purporting to have been written by a woman. Lord Chesterfield, Lord Ormathwaite and others testified that they had received letters similar to those read by Lord Hothfield. The solicitor representing Earl Russell, whose wife recently unsuccessfully sued for a divorce, produced a letter signed "Ruth Morland," which was received just before the Earl married Miss Scott. It reads; "You are to be married next week. What would Miss Scott think of you if she could read your letters that are in my possession? Is it altogether impossible that she may see them before Thursday? And that hundred you owe me, of which you have not paid a penny, may so anger me that I will put the letters in my husband's hands and concess my adultery with you and cause my self to figure in the Divorce Court. Send an answer by return post or I will know what to do legally." The court then adjourned. who is described as an Oxford tutor, and
