Hydra-Headed

Middleweight Crown Now Has Two Defenders.

DOWNEY AND WILSON.

Who is the middleweight champion?

Is it Johnny Wilson or Bryan Downey? It all depends on where you live to decide this question.

If you are a resident of Ohlo you will swear by Downey. If, on the other hand you came from Massachusetts Wilson is still the best in the 158-pound

From here it looks as if Wilson still is the champion, though Downley getting a raw deal if Johnny continues to be recognized. And Wilson may be recognized by most of the state boxing commissions because of the grievous mistake made by the Cleveland Boxing Commission in permitting Wilson to force the commission to use his own hand-picked referee. The Cleveland Commission accepted Jimmy Gardner of Boston as the referee It thus made him the sole arbiter and when he awarded the match to Wilson on a foul he was within his rights in doing so and the Cleveland Commission was without authority in rescinding his action.

without authority in rescinding his action.

Wilson says an effort was made to "frame" him out of the title, that one of Downey's seconds tried to hold him down and that Downey hit him while he was on the floor. Downey, on the other hand, declares he was robbed of the decision. The National Boxing Association will have to decide the problem of who's who in the middleweight division. It's a hydra-headed question, and the title also is a hydra-headed thing. As the association has the backing of eighteen states whatever it does will be recognized.

While the wrangling is going on though Downey can sit back and watch the matchmakers battle for his services which, over night, have become much sought after. Wilson can do a little figuring on the purse he will get in a return match with Downey in New York next winter.

Seesawing on their path to the pennant, the Giants and Yankees set New York fans aglow with hopes or shake their confidence as the two teams go up and go down the two top rungs of the percentage ladder. Only a few days ago the Giants seemed on their way to a clear title to first place when they overtook the Pirates on the home grounds of the latter, and then came the reaction which caused New Yorkers to wonder if the team really could win a pennant. At the same time the Yankees were finding their path to leadership continually blocked by the Indians or their tenure of first place limited to one day only.

several days, something which they were unable to do before. It is true that the margin of leadership is about as narrow as a lead can be, but it is rebust enough to settle a pennant fight if it is all that separates two clubs on the last day of the season. The Hubmen have lost two games less than the Indians, and there is an advantage in this fact that is not apparent in a glance at the standing. They still have these two games to piay and win, while the contests are past history as far as the Indians are concerned

They still have these two games to piay and win, while the contests are past history as far as the Indians are concerned.

For a space of almost three weeks the Yankees face only the kind of opposition which should be beneficial to a club fighting to hold first place. Starting with yesterday's game against the White Sox the schedule calls for seventeen consecutive games by the Yanks against that club, the Macksmen and the Browns. If the Hugmen cannot retain their lead while battling these clubs, then it may be argued with reason that the team does not belong in front. The opportunity to step out and get a real lead is beckoning to the Yanks, and it is up to them to prove themselves worthy of top honors.

The Giants are still very much in the fight, though they have lost ground in the west. It is the second time that the McGrawmen have disappointed their followers by falling before weaker teams in the West after winning three out of four at Pittsburg. With another trip through the other section of the league scheduled for September, it behooves the players to pull themselves together and get the habit of winning on the road if they are to share in a world's series. At home the Giants are consistent winners, but the club has not shown the necessary resourcefulness on the road.

One bright feature of the past week, as far as the New York clubs are concerned, was the apparent slowing up of the Braves and Senators. Each club had threatened for a time to be a contender, but now the danger seems about over. As a result, each New York club has only one contender to beat out, and that task is exactly half as difficult as trying to drive two out of a pennant chase.

The real reason of O'Hearne's suspension will probably be that he was caught on inspection by the O. C. with a dirty revolver. Umps DeLave probably had both of his "guns" shining and fit.

No inquiring fan has written in asking for confirmation of the rumor that DeLave had callouses on both hips from gun totin. We could not answer that one, anyway, but almost any London fan could make a fair guess about this party's other characteristics.

Johnny Kilbane has signed to meet Danny Frush of Baltimore with $60,000 as his share. Frush will get $2,500 as his share. Wonder if Frush will have to buy his own admission ticket.

(BY SEE S. GEE)

A Britisher himself has let out what listens like the secret of the scarcty of fight titles in England.

Not keeping fit and point decisions are the two great faults of the English ring. Too many of these boys do their training on beer, so this analyst further claims as a reason for their lack of toughness. Wilde was a freak amongst British boxers, but the only other English boxers to amount to anything the last few years, Lewis and Freddy Welsh, took their training cues from the American boys.

Training on beer might produce a paunch, but not a punch, we tike it.

Cullen Cain has visited Matty Mathewson in his cerie perch at Saranac Lake, where he is making his tremendous fight for life and he tells the fans that reports of this and that about Eig Six are mostly untrue. The famous pitcher is neither gaining in his fight nor losing.

It is taking all the coolness and courage, qualities for which the master was noted on the diamond, to make this fight, but he is waging it patiently far away from even the faintest echoes of the sporting world, whose greatest idol he was a few years back, and is yet for that matter.

Kitchener Beavers Still Jump Ahead of Maines

KITCHENER, Aug. 8.—The management of the Kitchener ball club will not allow President Maines to take over the franchise of the league through their failure to pay the league the money due them, for the cash will be paid over at once. "The league dues will be paid, but not as a result of the threat of Mr. Maines," said one of the directors this morning. "A check for the amount had already been made out, but was being held." The Kitchener club as it exists"

The Kitchener club as it exists today intends carrying on until President Maines comes here next week to help in the stock sale, and the directors are expecting that he will do the same here as he did in Hamilton, raise the money and make it a community ball club.

"There is no chance of puting Harry Tolton to the bad," said an insider today. "He is not going to drop out at the finish when it will not take much more money to protect much more money to protect what he already has in th
