

RUSSELL SAGE.

RUSSELL SAGE.

No one, to look at Russell Sage, would take him for a keen, shrewd speculator, who keeps his own secrets, has always an eye on the main chance, and has amassed a fortune where most men lose all that they invest. The spectacles, the carefully-arranged dark hair, streaked with gray, the fringe of whisker under the chin, and the serious, deeply-lined face suggest rather the prim deacon of a country church than the wide-awake man of affairs. Mr. Sage is a native of Troy, N. Y., and in his early manhood taught school. But he had little fondness for this work, and, at the earliest possible moment, laid down the birch and chalk for the scales and yardstick. As the proprietor of a small store he showed the qualities which have enabled him to wrest favors from Fortune in Wall street. He became in time a banker, and served two terms in Congress. From politics he retired to re-enter the world of finance. The millions which he possesses to-day were gained in general speculative and "put and call" operations. Mr. Sage is known as a man of set purpose and great determination, who cannot be tempted into saying more than he desires to say.

Catarrh.

Grand Detour, Ill., March 27, 1884.

Mr. A. J. WHITE, 54 Warren street, New York.

Dear Sir:—After suffering everything from the loathsome disease, catarrh, I commenced taking your Seigel's Syrup, and am now completely cured and can recommend it to all suffering from the above complaint.

Yours very respectfully,

SURREPTA PALMER.

Suiting the Word to the Action.—A New York day school teacher told her pupils that when they put their pennies into the contribution box she wanted them to repeat a Bible verse suitable for the occasion. The first boy dropped in his cent, saying: "The Lord loveth a cheerful giver." The next boy dropped his penny into the box, saying: "He that giveth to the poor lendeth to the Lord." The third and youngest boy dropped in his penny, saying: "A fool and his money are soon parted."
