ALBERT CO. OIL WELLS GIVING HEAVY OUTPUT

Shipments Being Made Every Week to Plant at Halifax

MONCTON, Jan. 9.—It was learned on Saturday that large quantities of oil from the Albert Company wells, about seven miles from here, are being shipped weekly to the Imperial refineries at Halifax. These shipments, it is said, have been going on since the first day of January. The shipments at present consist of approximately 10,000 gallons of the crude products weekly.

It is understood that the contract with the Canadian National Railways calls for the shipment of 200,000 gallons within the next three months.

HIGH-GRADE PRODUCT.

The oil, which is of a very high grade, has been in use for many years and has proved very satisfactory. Many years ago several carloads were shipped from Albert county and the wells then operating in the vicinity of Moncton, but nothing on the scale now under way has been attempted before.

It is understood, as well, that the price is about six cents a gallon delivered at the car, as the oil is exceptionally high-grade and compares very favorably with Pennsylvania oil, which is usually rated for the highest.

ALDEN SHUTE DIES BENEATH WRECK

Annapolis County Man's Auto
Jumps Bridge Near Barton,
N. S., Saturday

DIGBY, Jan. 9.—Alden Shute, of Clements, a fur buyer, was instantly killed last night when the car in which he was driving crashed through a bridge falling at Barton, a village on the trail, and his driver escaped with a bad shake-up which rendered him unconscious.

The driver of the car, Genos Sanford, was pinned under the overturned car nearly two hours with the dead body of his companion lying across his shoulders, until he recovered enough strength to extricate himself and go for help.

WHEELS SKID

The bridge stands at the foot of a hill, and when the car approached the wheels skidded. Sanford pulled too far over and crashed through the railing. The car turned over and landed upside down on the bank of the creek. Chute died instantly, according to the opinion of physicians. Sanford recovered sufficiently to return to his home.

An inquest was started and adjourned until Monday afternoon.

Letters To The Editor

POLITICAL SUGGESTIONS.

Editor Evening Times-Star:

Sir,—During the Dominion election of 1925 and 1926 there were frequent complaints to the effect that instead of public issues being discussed there were too many personalities indulged in, and that, as a result, the electors were left without information or guidance at a time when they had a right to expect both. These complaints were not seriously challenged. Indeed, there was more than one admission that they were well-founded. But nobody thought it worth while to go to the root of the matter, or to suggest a remedy, and there seemed to be a general inclination to shuffle out of responsibility by blaming it on the other fellow. Now that there are no elections in prospect or in sight, seems to be a good time to give heed to the complaints mentioned and to suggest a course of public action that would place political discussion on a higher plane, and give rise to clear thinking and rational action with regard to politics and politicians.

Since the early nineties the usual practice has been to confine public discussion of political affairs to the platform and to the turbulent month or so immediately preceding a general election. As comparatively few people read the reports of the proceedings in Parliament, and as the pre-election turmoil generally precludes any serious consideration of public issues, it is not surprising that there is a lack of informed public opinion throughout the country. The question, then, naturally arises, what course should be followed to create an informed public opinion in all parts of the Dominion.

Two Suggestions.

My first suggestion would be that during each Parliamentary recess the press should present their program to the people through a series of public meetings.

In the summer time these might take the form of political picnics—such as were made famous in the old days by Sir John Macdonald, Sir Charles Tupper, Hon. Alexander MacKenzie and Hon. Edward Blake. If the speeches at these meetings were up to the standards set by most of the speakers at the old-time political picnics, their educational effect would be of great benefit, particularly to newcomers and to the youth of the country. Moreover, such speeches, delivered under such circumstances, would give the public time to weigh the arguments advanced and to reach sound conclusions regarding them without being influenced by the local and personal appeals that are inseparable from the speeches delivered during the heat of an election campaign.

My second suggestion is that the Liberal and the Conservative parties should adopt the practice followed by the Liberals and the Conservatives in England and by the Republicans and the Democrats in the United States, and arrange annual pilgrimages to the homes of their great leaders, Sir Wilfrid Laurier and Sir John Macdonald. The homes of Gladstone and Disraeli in England and of Lincoln in the United States are made the rallying places of those who carry on the traditions of these great men in their respective countries. Why should not a similar practice be initiated in this country with regard to the homes of Sir Wilfrid Laurier and Sir John Macdonald? The former lived at Laurier House and died there while Macnamara was long the residence, as well as the place of death, of the great Conservative chieftain. The anniversaries of the births of these two statesmen might furnish occasions for the suggested pilgrimages, as well as for addresses by eminent Canadian representatives of Parliament. In this way a substantial contribution would be made each year towards the forming of an enlightened public opinion on a national scale.

Laurier House.

As is well known, Laurier House, the home of Sir Wilfrid and Lady Laurier, was purchased in 1897 by a group of Liberals, represented by the late Hon. Robert Mackay, of Montreal, and Hon. W. C. Edwards and Sir Henry Bate, of Ottawa, and presented by them to the Liberal chieftain and his wife as an official residence. In the registered documents of title Messrs. Mackay, Edwards and Bate were described as "trustees," thus indicating that they acted not in a personal capacity, but in an official, public character. By her will, made in 1921, Lady Laurier purported to transfer the house to the then Liberal leader as "an official residence," and she made plain her intention by stating that "this house having been given us by political friends of my husband, I am of the opinion that it should return to the Liberal Party." Shortly after Lady Laurier's death, Laurier House was entirely remodelled and refurnished, through the princely munificence of Hon. P. C. Larkin and a few other gentlemen, and its interior now presents an appearance in every way worthy of a national shrine.

It will not, I trust, be regarded as an intrusion upon the party domain of our Conservative friends if I should point out that the purchase by the Liberals for a purpose similar to that for which Laurier House was purchased by a group of Liberals would give practical effect to one of the principal suggestions above contained. Were that done, and annual pilgrimages arranged by the Liberals and the Conservatives to Laurier House and Earlecliffe, respectively, and if on each of such occasions our national problems were discussed by men competent to deal with them, the addresses themselves, as well as the resultant publicity and discussion, would be of great benefit in creating a Dominion-wide body of public opinion that would not tolerate the discussion of such topics during the course of election campaigns.

THE HARKINS PLAYERS.

To the Editor of The Times-Star.

Sir,—In your issue of the 8th anniversary of Mr. W. S. Harkins' appearance on the stage in the Maritime Provinces, published in Saturday's Times-Star, you say "The best of plays of the time and notable people of the stage to present them. Many of these late rose to the height of stardom."

All of which is true, but may I add many of these were "stars" on Broadway.

Respectfully yours,

W. R. GOLDING,

Between 75 and 80 seamen attended the Sunday evening service in the Seamen's Institute last night and greatly appreciated the special address and music. Rev. E.
