SHANKS NATIONAL FIELDER

Howard Shanks is one of the cleverest left fielders in the game, when it comes to the fielding end of it. If he was as strong with the bat it would make Griffith's task much easier this season.

The Nationals are the object of much interest this year. The Washington fans expect them to be ahead at their 1912 speed and will be greatly disappointed if they don't. The team looks stronger than last season, and if Shanks will continue the good hitting that he has been doing this spring one of the two weak spots will be plugged up.

Epson Downs Trick is Two Centuries Old—Notes about "Jiggs" Donohue.

Historic Epson, the oldest of the great racing courses of England, Newmarket excepted, will be the scene today of three great turf events, the Great Metropolitan Handicap, the Great Surrey Handicap and the Norfolk Park Plate. The famous City and Suburban Handicap is also scheduled for decision at Epson tomorrow. The big event of the year at Epson is, of course, the Derby, to be run this year on June 4th. Epson has been a racing centre for over two centuries, the first meet having been held there in 1731. It was not until 1739 that regular annual meetings were inaugurated, however. The Oaks—which famous turf classic will be held this year on June 6th—was begun by Edward Stanley, twelfth Earl of Derby, in 1779, and the Epson Derby was inaugurated the following year. The first foreign horse to capture the classic was the French colt Gladiateur, owned by Count Lagrange, in 1805. It was at about that time that the Derby began to be recognized as one of the greatest of turf events. For fifteen or twenty years after its inaugural it had a small value and there was little distinction in winning it.

"Jiggs" Donohue, recently reported dead in an Ohio insane asylum—although the report has since been denied—has been the subject of many reminiscent stories, but the sport writers have overlooked one of Donohue's claims to fame, which was that he was the last ball player to wear whiskers. Long after other players had discarded the hirsute appendages, "Jiggs" clung to the facial ornament. The great first baseman was led to dispenze with the beard by an incident that occurred in Nashville, Tenn. The outer garden was overgrown with bushes and brambles, and "Jiggs" was stationed in right field during an exhibition game. He chased a long fly into the thicket, caught his foot on something, and dived head first into a mass of thorny bushes. Most of his whiskers had to be cut off before he could be extricated, and after that "Jiggs" visited the barber regularly. Jim O'Rourke, of the Giants, and Fred Titus, of the Phillies, were perhaps the last diamond stars to wear brushes on their upper lips. O'Rourke's moustache was long and flowing and was the pride of his life until a certain day when it blew into his eyes and caused him to muffle a ball at a critical period of a game. Then Jim went to a tonsorial artist and kissed his moustache good-bye.
