SERBIAN HISTORY

ONE OF SELF PRESERVATION

That Country Helped to Keep Europe from Moslem Domination—Sufferings Borne With Patience.

The history of Serbia has been one long chapter of endeavor to preserve itself—and through itself, Europe also—from domination by the Moslem invader and to preserve its national interests from destruction at the hands of those whom it has protected with the blood of its people. Within the last four years it has been sacrificed by the shortsighted and temporizing diplomatic policy of the Allies in the Balkans and almost annihilated by the Magyar and Teutonic neighbors. Its sufferings it has borne with patience and it has maintained the determination to return, with the help of those who owe it reparation for its sacrifices to their supposed interests, its status as an independent nation. Serbia is by all counts the natural leader of the Balkan peoples in their fight against the obsolete and decaying empire of the Hapsburgs come to align themselves ethnographically after the war Bosnia, Herzegovina and large districts in southern Hungary will gravitate, as a matter of course, into close alliance with Serbia. The new state of Yugoslavia will be in many respects a glorified Serbia, though it will be a Serbia glorified by the recognition of equal rights within the new state for all Yugoslavs, whether formerly Serbian or not.

To the creation of the peace conference which will follow the destruction of the power of Prussianism in Europe of the an independent Yugoslavia state the Entente Allies are pledged, formally and inescapably. For long the stumbling block in the path which is clearly pointed out to them by the principles for which they are fighting is the attitude of the Italian government. Not that Italy desired to deprive Serbia of its pre-war status or the satisfaction of its natural aspirations, which, indeed, is a close parallel in those of Italy itself. But the fundamental issue at stake in the struggle had not been sufficiently clarified; it was difficult to realize that in supporting the right of all nations, great and small, to self-determination and self-government, the Allied peoples had committed themselves to the application of principle which would, in practice, render impossible any of those convenient dispositions of territory to which diplomacy had previously been accustomed to resort in order to maintain a delicate and insecure "balance of power" in Europe.

Italy has, in common with its allies, come to realize the necessity for satisfying the aspirations of the Jugo-Slav race for freedom to develop its national, its political and its economic life. The recognition of this principle, however, is a public statement by the Italian government which ought to be recognized among the civilized peoples as the liberal deed which it is small consolation to the Councils, the declaration says, "to inform the Allies' governments that the Italian Government regards the movement of the Jugo-Slav peoples for the conquest of their independence, and for their constitution into a free state, as corresponding to the principles for which the Entente is fighting, and also to the aims of a just and lasting peace."

Self-interest is a powerful influence in determining the policies of nations which it is not always easy to subordinate to principle. Frequently the self-interest of nations, as of individuals, blinds them unconsciously to themselves, to the justice of their claims, to the justice of the claims of others. Italy may be pardoned for finding it hard to recognize the inherent justice of a claim which must to some extent dismember its own empire and limit its influence in the Adriatic, to which the new Jugo-Slav state must have full access and upon which it must have equal rights with its neighbors if its economic and political independence is to be more than a polite fiction.
