DEALER IN The conduct of Government officials in The conduct of Government officials in India in blowing from the cannon's mouth some fifty natives, has created much excite-ment in England, and the facts having been ascertained the act is generally con-demned. The men who met with death in this terrible form belonged to the Kookas, a tribe or caste of Hindoos, who to the number of three hundred revolted against English rule. They attacked a Govern-ment station near Delhi and killed one or two of the soldiers of the garrison but were promply repulsed with far greater loss to themselves. Of course they were pursued in their retreat, and, as we are now informed, " literally hunted down." Of the captives, fifty were selected for execution on the spot, and sixteen more were put to death at Umbella, the insurrection having been, even before the executions, completely suppressed. Commenting on the executions, the Times observes it is quits conceivable that even this measure of punishment might not have been too great for the exigencies of the occasion. Action as prompt in 1857, the Times believes, would have saved Eng-land from the terrible mutiny of the Ben-ral army and the sanguinary contests which followed. And it adds "That three hund-red men should in the immediate neigh-borhood of the army of exercise attempt an armed insurrection against the Supreme Government is of itself a circumstance tending to perplex our conclusions." The Indian Government is proceeding to in-vestigate the whole circumstances attend-ing these executions, and Beputy Gom-missioner Cowan, the official in charge, has been suspended pending the enquiry. Instructions were sent to his gentleman by his superior officer that none of the prisoners were to be condemned without a formal trial, but before the latter came to hand Mr. Cowan had had fifty of the re-bels summarily executed.--Ex.
