On Sundays most of the boys and their instructors are engaged in evangelistic work in the town or the surrounding villages. We look forward to seeing this branch of our service become a great blessing to many, both temporally and spiritually.

The Lace Industry seems to have fallen on hard times. The demand for this product is not as brisk as it used to be, and the ladies of the mission who manage this work often meet with financial embarrassment, due to the slow sale of stocks on hand. At this end it is hard to limit the output, for the workers so badly need the money they earn in this way. Many of the Christian women support themselves entirely by their skill in lace-making. We solicit the earnest co-operation of our ladies at home to ensure profitable sales.

Jewelry holds a prominent place at Poleyilly, on the Bimlipatam field. The story of this industry is well known to many of our readers; how 25 years ago a goldsmith of that village accepted Christ and was threatened with starvation because his trade was boycotted, and how the missionaries, (chiefly Mrs. Gullison, then Miss Newcombe), solicited orders among Christian friends and others, and kept the work going. Relatives of the same man later accepted Christ also, and joined in the work. The industry grew on its merits and is now a thriving concern. It has done much to keep the lamp of God burning brightly in that village, in spite of fierce opposition.

In Vizianagram a small knitting industry under the management of Miss Flora Clarke, continues to give employment to several Christian men, while the girls of the Henrietta Ayer Anderson Orphanage, also under her direction, gave considerable help towards their support by making various articles of raffia work, bead necklaces, handkerchiefs, leather novelties, etc.
