

WHATEVER IS, IS BEST.
 I know, as my life grows older,
 And mine eyes have clearer sight,
 That under each rank Wrong, somewhere
 There lies the root of right.
 Taught each sorrow has its purpose,
 By the sorrowing oft unguessed;
 But as sure as the sun brings morning,
 Whatever is, is best.

I know that each sinful action,
 As sure as the night brings shade,
 Is sometime, somewhere, punished.
 Tho' the hour be long delayed.
 I know that the soul is aided
 Sometimes by the heart's unrest,
 And to grow means often to suffer;
 But whatever is, is best.

I know there are no errors
 In the great Eternal plan,
 And all things work together
 For the final good of man,
 And I know when my soul speaks onward
 In the grand Eternal quest,
 I shall say, as I look onward,
 Whatever is, is best.

another cross on the the circuit of my true love."

"And had it not been for that dear Betsy King with her investives we should have been mixed, and not had a case now?" exclaimed Cyn, "I declare, I could hug her."

But Betsy King not being available just then, she substituted Nattie, and gave her a most emphatic squeeze.

"It was your shot about the Torpedo that finished her, Cyn," laughed Clem.

"It was effective, I flatter myself," Cyn confessed. "And that reminds me you must not stay here now, Nat, you know; so I have seen Mrs. Simonsen, and you are going to live with me—for the present"—glancing archly at her, "until that book is written, for instance."

"And it will be written, now, I know!" said Nattie, earnestly, her eyes shining.

"You remember what you once said, Cyn? I see now you were right."

"Yes," said Cyn, seriously, and thank Heaven it was love, and not disappointment, that came!"

"Love shall not come in vain!" Nattie said, as seriously. "I will be worthy of it!"

The after years only could prove her words. But in Clem's face the belief in them was written as plainly as if those future possibilities were acknowledged results.

"We must have another feast to celebrate events!" Cyn said gaily, "you are happy; my romance is O. K.; Celeste is ecstatic; Quimby as joyful as circum- stances permit the victim of mistake to be; Jo and I are hopeful of future fame—and we certainly must have a feast!"

"With plenty of dishes this time," laughed Clem, "and there shall be no more crosses on the wire!"

"But bless my heart!" ejaculated Cyn, "There you two are making love like ordinary mortals"—at this Nattie hastily withdrew the hand Clem had taken—Quimby and Celeste, for instance! This will never do! We must end this romance of dots and dashes as it commenced, to make it truly 'Wired Love'!"

"True enough! so we must!" answered Clem merrily, and rising, he went to the "key," with his eyes looking straight into Nattie's, and wrote something that made her blush, and seize his hand in shy and unnecessary alarm, saying,

"Suppose Jo should be over in your room! He might be able to read it!"

"Very well," replied Clem, as he laughed and kissed her, regardless of the specta- tor. "I am quite content to make love like common mortals, Cyn, and I hope, my darling Nattie, that we are done with all breaks and 'crosses' as we are with Wired Love. Henceforth ours shall be the pure, unalloyed article, genuine love!"

And Nattie, half-laughing, half-serious, but wholly glad, took the key and wrote "O. K."

If any one is anxious to know what Clem wrote when Nattie stopped him, here it is.

THE HABIT OF VERBOSITY.

The habit of verbosity is a standard characteristic of human nature. We have all met people who are fond of using high sounding speech. A gentleman said to his servant Pat: "I am going to town at 10 o'clock, and shall weed out the cucumber bed in the interim." "Inter- im," thought Pat. "That's a queer name for a garden, anyhow." "Is Mr. Smith at home?" asked a visitor who came shortly afterwards. "Yes, sir; ye'll find him at work in his interim, there beyond," announced Pat.

Any man can pick up courage enough to be heroic for an hour; to be patient- ly heroic daily is the test of character.

No one ever knew what friends were worth until they had lived without them.
