Then and Now.

By RUTH CAMERON.

RUTH CAMERON

"I was upstairs, mamma, moving my things," said Susan, in a fearless tone, which startled Fanny. "You know you had but just settled that my sister Fanny and I should have the other room; and I could not get Rebecca to give me any help." — Jane Austen.

being not quite recovered from my after-Christmas mood, I have been reading my beloved Jane Austen's books instead of acquainting myself with something new.

The above quotation is from "Mansfield Park" and I have introduced it, because it illustrates that thing which struck me most recently this time, and that is the remarkable amount of filial respect and which was taken for granted in the portrayal of the life of a century away two desirable young men who were on the verge of falling in love with her daughters by her vulgar manners and her indiscretion in talking to her neighbour about the elder daughter's engagement before it had materialized.

They Never Thought of Remonstrating With Their Mother.

The girls are too sensitive and intelligent not to suffer constantly from their mother's vulgarity, and yet in spite of this and in spite of the fact that the elder is almost heart-broken over the loss of her lover, to whom she was sincerely attached, it scarcely seems to occur to them that they might remonstrate with their parent.

On just one occasion, the time when Mrs. Bennett is making herself and her family ridiculous by talking about the advantages of Jane's engagement before the young man has proposed, does Elizabeth, who is very fond of her sister say, "For heaven's sake, madame speak lower," a warning which is not availed.

As the thing is happening in a novel instead of real life, the two lovers do return, and, in spite of the mother's silliness and vulgarity, show themselves anxious to marry the daughters.

And Elizabeth Is Supposed To Be A Girl Of Spirit.

One would think that this time the daughter would take the mother aside and gently warn her against offending again. But no, though Elizabeth is supposed to be a girl of unusual spirit, she resigns herself without a protest, to this evil and finds her only safety in the fact that "Mrs. Bennett luckily stood in such awe of her intended son-in-law that she ventured not to speak to him, unless it were in her power to offer him any attention or mark her deference for his opinion."

Wasn't Customary For A Girl To Justify Herself.

usan, of the quotation, defends herself from an unfair accusation of mess, by giving an account of what she has been doing. It is difficult to imagine any fourteen-year-old child of to-day who would not justify herself. And yet so far such a way of speaking to one's mother from the usages of good society, that, as you perceive, the well-bred Fanny is startled.

"Pride and Prejudice," as you will remember, Mrs. Bennett, ill-bred, silly mother of two young, well-bred girls, drives

The contrast between then and now is great, is it not?

One can just fancy how Mrs. Bennett would have been sat upon by her daughters if she had had the misfortune to live a century later. Indeed, most of us know some gentle little mother with none of Mrs. Bennett's faults, who is constantly rebuked by her children, just because she isn't as up-to-date as they.

One might not mind seeing the Mrs. Bennetts rebuked occasionally, but one could wish for the sake of more deserving parents that a little more of the filial respect that protected her were shown in the present generation.

BAD COOKING.

What is it that ruins true love's course, and makes men cuss till they are hoarse and leads to quarrels and divorce? Bad cooking. What is it that ruins love's young dream, and queers the matrimonial team, and makes the married life a scream? Bad cooking.

What is it comes when women prance to church party and to dance, and leave the home at every chance? Bad cooking. What follows when the girls grow smart, and say they're wedded to their Art, and learn some lissen junk by heart? Bad cooking. What happens when they play the harp as well as some imported sharp, instead of frying German carp? Bad cooking. What is it fills untimely graves, out where the boneyard-bluegrass waves, with victims of the kitchen knaves? Bad cooking. What is it drives the boys from home, in glaring, noisy dens to roam, and from cold steins to blow the foam? Bad cooking. Why are the people taking pills, and medicine in flowing rills, and always paying doctors' bills? Bad cooking.

Splendid Recruiting at Grand Falls.

Want was probably the first recruiting meeting towards the second battalion of the Newfoundland Regiment took place at Grand Falls on the evening of February 15th.

The meeting, which was organized by the Grand Falls Patriotic Association, took place in the Town Hall, Mr. N. Pike, of H. M. Customs, in the unavoidable absence of Magistrate Fitzgerald, taking the chair. The town band and the Salvation Army band were present in full force, and at intervals played in a spirited manner patriotic airs. The meeting was a large, representative, and enthusiastic one, and was evidence that the people of the paper town are fully alive to their duty as citizens of the Empire.

Seated on the platform around the Chairman were the following members of the Grand Falls Patriotic Association: Rev. W. Dunn, Adj. Brown (Salvation Army), and Messrs. Josiah Goodyear, Arthur P. Nelson, and J. H. Bellamy, Hon. Secy. In the audience were William Scott, Esq., Director of the Anglo-Nfld. Dev. Co., Ltd., and W. W. Blackall, Esq., Supt. of Education, a member of the recruiting committee of the Nfld. Patriotic Association.

Mr. Pike opened proceedings shortly after eight o'clock by reading a telegram that had been received from the recruiting committee in St. John's. He dwelt briefly upon the cruelties of the Germans, giving a short account of the wicked murder of Miss Edith Cavell, and appealed to the young men of the town to come forward, not only to avenge the death of this Christian martyr, but also to crush the tyrant power that threatened to enslave the peoples of the world.

Mr. Goodyear was next called upon to speak. Mr. Goodyear is the father of five stalwart soldiers of the King, and his rising was hailed with three very hearty cheers. In modest yet manly fashion he urged other families to do their part. He wished he were young enough to join the ranks, and while he would not go so far as to say that the young men who held back were cowards, he would certainly have to regard them as "slackers."

Mr. O'Flynn then spoke. With great emphasis he pointed to the "Godless materialism of the Prussian horde," and bade his fellows follow the impulse that he felt sure was urging them to come forward and fight for the right.

Adj. Brown, of the Salvation Army followed. As a member of the Salvation Army he did not hesitate to speak for some 30,000 of their ranks at home had joined His Majesty's forces, and were prepared to face death in defence of liberty and freedom. Let the young men of to-day prove themselves equal to the occasion, and not inferior to the men who won Waterloo and Trafalgar.

Mr. J. P. Nelson, a gentleman who has travelled much, testified to the immorality of the German and Austrian peoples, pointed out the dangers in the midst of which we lived, even here in Newfoundland should there, not be men enough offering to crush the Kaiser's cruel press gang.

YOUR BRONCHIAL TUBES

When a cold settles in the bronchial tubes, with that weakening, tickling cough, immediate treatment is very important. The breath seems shorter because of mucous obstructions; usually fever is present, your head aches with every cough, and your chest may ache. This is no time for experimenting or delay—you must get Scott's Emulsion at once to drive out the cold which started the trouble, and it will check the cough by aiding the healing process of the enfeebled membranes.

If you have any symptoms of bronchitis, or even a stubborn cold, always remember that Scott's Emulsion has been relieving this trouble for forty years. It is free from harmful drugs. Refuse substitutes.

Scott & Bower, Toronto, Ont. 15-2

gave a stirring call to young Newfoundlanders to go forward in the strength of that spirit that had made their forefathers of Devon, Cornwall and Dorset famous in years gone by.

The Rev. W. Dunn followed. In impressive and eloquent words, as well as with apt illustration, he showed how little the German people, from the Kaiser down, understood how to "play the game." Their gospel was to "get there," no matter how we were, therefore, fighting a ruthless and unchivalrous people. This made our task the greater, and therefore the greater became the duty of every fit man to come to the rescue. On behalf of those who had already suffered and died, and on behalf of our homes, and all we hold dear, he bade the young men of Grand Falls to "play the game" and rally to the aid of the Empire.

At this point the chairman invited Mr. Scott to come forward and say a few words of encouragement. With suppressed passion Mr. Scott pictured the horrors that would undoubtedly be perpetrated even in Newfoundland, were the Empire to appeal in vain for men to come forward and swell the ranks. There was nothing to fear from the cruel Huns if we all did our duty, but it was men that were wanted, and if these failed we must contemplate the horrors of Belgium and Serbia nearer home.

Secretary Ballentyne, with the blood of Scotland tingling in his veins, and mindful of the great sacrifice the sons of Scotland have already made, bade the young men of the country to fall the Motherland.

The Chairman then called for recruits to come forward, and while this was going on, Mr. Blackall, as a member of the recruiting committee, asked leave to address the audience. He expressed his delight at the Government's wish to raise a second battalion for Newfoundland; undertook to report the meeting to headquarters; urged fathers and mothers to encourage their sons to go forward, rather than discourage them, for, said he, "the sons of Newfoundland are not lacking in courage, rather were they full of daring and hope, and eager to go forward in the steps of the men who had shown such grit and pluck in the hell of Gallipoli." This was probably the first recruiting meeting, he stated, that had been held in the country on behalf of the second battalion, and he felt assured that the lead would be a good one—so good, indeed, that a special train would be required to take the crowd to St. John's.

The net result was a list of 52 recruits, which, added to what had already been done in Grand Falls, brought the total up to 136. Indeed Grand Falls is doing well.

The writer is glad to learn that the Anglo-Nfld. Dev. Co., Ltd., have so far done exceedingly well for their employees. Every man who has gone forward has had the assurance that his job would be kept for him; that he would be welcomed back on his return; and that during his absence his Army pay would be supplemented sufficiently to maintain his wages.

How grand it would be if all large employers of labor throughout the land would do this. It is surely their duty to do so. It is a contribution and a sacrifice that they could if they would make. It is stated that the undertaking on behalf of the Anglo-Nfld. Dev. Co., so far costs the Company for supplemental pay $1,000 per month.
