LONDON

LONDON, Aug. 31.

The coming of the third year of the war reminds one that ages of strange experiences have been even by us who have never left our land and that it is impossible to perceive the difference between the then and now in the war-time that ended on August 11. But although nearly everything has changed, we are sure by what has happened that what has not happened. The extraordinary apparition of the London, for instance, has been Zeppelins, but we know that Zeppelins, and when we are caught in the searchlights, the silver sigar in the black sky, we recognise how like it was on the outside covers of our magazines. The man who was in the London life—the theatre, the restaurants, the shops, smart cigars, boasting up the river, as usual (up to the other side) dancing in the afternoon, would not have been in London long ago into something shabbier.

CHANGED STREET

We are in August, the ordinary years. Yet two years, opera-houses, and halls in West London, new plays are coming, the productions are reviewed, the paper has disappeared, the hand two Sunday have boomed forth and

An Epidemic of Games.

By RUTH CAMERON.

RUTH CAMERON

In our neighborhood lately we have had an epidemic of simple games. It all started on a week-end house party. The weather (as usual this spring) was bad and some one had an inspiration to bring, besides the inevitable bridge paraphernalia, a small collection of the games we used to play years ago.

In the middle of a drizzly afternoon, just when everyone was beginning to get a bit bored, he produced them, and you can't imagine what a diversion they created.

Those Energetic Males.

The two most energetic males left off some of their superfluous energy at ping-pong.

Four more sat down to parchesi and became children again over that foolish, funny, fascinating old game.

An Entertaining Game For Two.

Two sat down to go-hang, which, on the chance it didn't enter your childhood, I will explain, consists of a contest to get five counters in a row first. It sounds simple but has almost as much science as checkers.

In the evening we all had an amusing game of letters.

We had three rainy days in succession, and before we went home, everyone blessed the man who brought the games.

The aftermath was equally interesting.

How The Virus Took.

We are having a running tournament of go-hang among the members of the family this summer.

One of the guests wrote us that she had started a parchesi tournament at the Inn where she stopped.

Still another introduced the good old game of letters to her family, and it has given bridge a rest with them.

Of course all these diversions are more or less childlike, but who doesn't enjoy being childlike once in awhile? They are simple, inexpensive, amusing entertainment and as such I call your attention to them.

Incidentally, I want to say a word about games and children.

What Games Do For Children. Games are a great educational force. They amuse and at the same time train the mind.

I cannot understand the parents who do not play games with their children. In our home life the evening game with the grown-ups, and perhaps my beloved uncle, used to be one of the brightest spots.

Games teach concentration, they cultivate alertness and stimulate ambition and the competitive spirit.

Of course there are dangers in this latter quality, but rightly directed it is a great force, and naturally the wise parent will see that it is properly held in check by the spirit of the game, the spirit that teaches the child to be a modest winner and a good loser.

Vitagraph Co. Sues Ford For a Million.

Papers Served on Automobile Manufacturer for His Criticism of Film Advertisement is Quoted—"The Battle Cry of Peace" Damaged Complaint Says, by Charge That Munitions Men Backed It.

Henry Ford, automobile manufacturer and peace advocate, was yesterday served with papers in the $1,000,000 damage suit brought against him in the Supreme Court of New York by the Vitagraph Company of America. In the complaint, which is dated June 20, 1916, and since when efforts have been made to summon Mr. Ford, he Vitagraph Company alleges that the automobile manufacturer on May 5, "caused to be published in not less than 250 newspapers published in the United States and circulated broadcast throughout the United States and Canada, and elsewhere, an article entitled 'Humanity and Sanity,' in which he charged in substance that the general agitation then prevailing in this country for preparedness and defence of this country against foreign invasion was due to the efforts of munitions manufacturers to promote their selfish interests, and that 'The Battle Cry of Peace,' a film manufactured and produced by the plaintiff at great expense, to wit, $250,000; more or less was inspired by one Hudson Maxim, a manufacturer of munitions of war, in the interests of munition manufacturers for the personal and selfish gain and interest of said Maxim, and others interested with him 'in the manufacture and sale of munitions.' Then followed a copy of the advertisement, the offending paragraph of which read:

"The Battle Cry of Maxim. 'Have you seen that awful moving picture, 'The Battle Cry of Peace'? 'Did you shake with fear and tremble for your country's safety?' 'Did you know that others were shaking at the same time, but with laughter at your fear, and with joy over the fat contracts your fear might bring them?'"

"On the screen you were told that the play was founded on the story of Hudson Maxim, 'Defenceless America.' You saw Mr. Maxim in the picture. He was holding something aloft. It was an instrument of warfare."

"Now, Mr. Maxim was merely advertising his goods and playing on your fears to make a market for his goods."

"Mr. Maxim has something to sell—war munitions."

The Vitagraph Company follows the copy of the advertisement by its specific complaint which is, "that the charge made in said article by the defendant was made and tended to convey to the public the impression that the said moving picture, 'The Battle Cry of Peace,' was produced by the plaintiff and in the interest of the said Hudson Maxim."

Further the complaint says that "the charge made in said articles was meant to and tended to convey the impression to the public 'that the plaintiff was wilfully, wickedly, and maliciously attempting to inspire in the public mind the belief that this country stood in great danger in the event of an invasion by a foreign foe by reason of its inadequate army and navy and its inability to successfully resist invasion, and that this plaintiff did this from ignoble, dishonest, dishonorable, and treasonable motives."

The record of the Vitagraph Company is then given and the allegation made that "the defamatory article published by the defendant has to a great extent injured the reputation and plaintiff's business."

In conclusion the complaint says "by reason of the publication of the aforesaid words and matter by the said defendant, that plaintiff has been greatly injured in its good name, fame and credit, and brought into public obloquy and disrepute throughout the United States of America and Canada, and elsewhere to its damage in the sum of $1,000,000."

"Wherefore, plaintiff prays judgment against the defendant for the sum of $1,000,000, together with the costs and disbursements of this action."

William A. Ulman, an attorney of 233 Broadway, is acting for J. Stuart Blackton, Vice President of the Vitagraph Company. Commodore Blackton said last night that he had sued Mr. Ford "because his false and malicious allegations have injured both my reputation and my business. I am bitterly opposed to his pacifist views," he added, "and think that his propaganda is working damage and injury to this country, but I do not print false statements and page advertisements stating that he is assuming his present spineless attitude for the purpose of increasing the sale of Ford cars. I wrote and produced 'The Battle Cry of Peace' to further the interests of practical preparedness."

"The accusation that the munitions interests are responsible for the picture is absolutely without foundation."—N. Y. Times.

SPORTING DUCHESS AT THE NICKEL.

There is another magnificent programme at the Nickel Theatre today. The pictures, as is always the case, have been carefully selected and are certain to afford satisfaction and pleasure to all. The Lubin Company presents the charming artists Rose Coughlan and Ethel Clayton in a powerful five act social drama entitled: "The Sporting Duchess." This picture is adapted from the famous play of the same name by Cecil Raleigh. It abounds in beautiful settings and talented acting. "The Strange Case of Mary Page" will be continued, and there will be other pleasing films. The Nickel is the great attraction these days every one likes to go there.

AT THE CRESCENT.

Lloyd V. Hamilton, the funniest man in the movies, and Bud Duncan, appear at the Crescent Picture Palace to-day in "Ham Takes a Chance," a laugh from start to finish. The Lubin Company presents a powerful feature in three reels: "Sold to Satan" with L. C. Shumway and E. Sloman. A beautiful scenic and instructive picture is the "Petrified Forest" near Adamano, Arizona. Mr. Sam Rose, baritone, sings "Yauka Hula Hickey Dula," the latest song hit from the Broadway Musical Comedy, "Robinson Crusoe Jr." Professor McCarthy presides at the piano playing a programme of the latest music including "A Poet's Vision," waltz, "Big Ben," "Ragtime March," etc., etc. This big show costs no more, take it in.
