ARM BROKEN, RIDES FLUME DARK ICEBERGS GREATEST MENACE TO SHIPPING

Twenty-Four Mile Dash in Lumber Chute is Taken by Man to Reach Doctor

In Box Boat and Alone Makes Perilous Journey Through Chasms and Eddies

San Francisco, Aug. 26.—With a broken arm, suspended in a plaster case, Harry Rogers of Red Bluff, traveled in an improvised boat down a lumber flume from Pine Lake in the Sierra Nevada to Red Bluff—a distance of 24 miles.

Rogers, with Bernal McClure and Charles Bush, of Red Bluff, were hunting when the broken arm occurred. The men were on a flume which Rogers had built on a log skid. Rogers had to be lowered down the flume and then taken to a hospital bed since the accident.

A box boat was constructed, Rogers stepped into it and away it went down the winding stream. Into deep chasms and over swift-flowing stretches of turbulent water, through turbulent eddies and into swirling eddies created with scolding foam, plunging and buffeted, the man with the broken arm sped as an occasional splash of water anyone might wish for. The boat tumbled and writhed and danced on the quickly shifting river. Rogers was tightly packed in his log rack and just hung on breathless until the end of the journey was reached, when he was picked up by Dr. Deane, who attended to his injuries right away.

Apart from slight exhaustion, no further damage was done. Rogers' arm, flume rider, whose arm is setting as if he had not been out of a hospital bed since the accident.

WEDS NEGRO GIRL TO GAIN HER FREEDOM

Warren, Ark., August 26.—Mrs. J. J. Pearce, nee Letha Bailey, a 14-year-old negro girl from the republic of Liberia, Africa, is attending school in Warren, herself to be a teacher of the women of her race in Africa. She is a genuine negro, born and bred in the lowlands of Liberia.

The Liberian Republic was founded in 1822 by American philanthropists for the purpose of giving the negroes certain civil and religious rights which could not be secured in other countries, and to enable the American negroes to assist the natives in their struggle for their freedom and to learn the arts of civilization. The republic contains 20,000 half civilized negroes, who mostly belong to the Yaka, Bassa, Krus and Mandingo tribes. The civilized inhabitants, assisted by the greater nations, govern the state. The principal occupations of most of the civilized inhabitants is to do missionary work among the half civilized negroes and to educate them in schools which are mostly under the direction of foreign missionaries.

One of the great drawbacks is that the teachers are forced to send their girls to men teachers. The result is that only the male children are being educated and civilized.

Among the missionary societies which are doing work in the state is that of the African Methodist Episcopal Zion Church, and it was at the school of this church that Letha first conceived the idea of qualifying herself for a teacher, so that she could teach her girls and her own to be a teacher in her own country. But her parents would not consent to her coming to America. She wanted to go to the missionary school but her parents would not consent to her coming to America. She wanted to go to the missionary school but her parents would not consent to her coming to America.

BOY FINDS SEVENTY-FIVE DOLLAR PEARL

St. Paul, Minn., Aug. 26.—Fred Cardigan, 18-year-old son of Charles T. Cardigan, 475 richer because he found a clam while he was camping on the Snake river, near Pine City. The boy found a pearl perfectly round and of good color, and when offered $75 for it by a pearl buyer he took it.

The furniture, pictures, the ornaments and the heaviest divans, all were Oriental, and many of them historical. There was carpet from Bagdad which had been perfectly round and of good color, and when offered $75 for it by a pearl buyer he took it.

Paris, Aug. 26.—New that M. Poincaré, the French premier, is back from Russia, events in the Near East are again arousing anxiety. The belief that the Italian-Turkish war looms in the foreground is being discredited. It is believed that Austria-Denmark is interested in an elastic interpretation of the terms of the Peace of Versailles.

Oil Well Drill Uncovers Human Teeth

Repulse, Okla., Aug. 26.—While drilling an oil well on the farm of Frank Emig, adjoining the city limits on the northwest, peculiar looking specimens were brought up from a depth of sixty-five feet. The specimens were examined under a powerful glass, which proved them to be the teeth of a man. It is believed by local physicians, who made the examination, that the remains of a human being were found by the drill and that it is an old burying ground of prehistoric man.

A local geologist declared it would have taken more than a thousand years for the deposition of earth sufficient to have placed the teeth at the level at which they were found.

ARMY HAD BEEN CHARACTER OF DRUM-BEATS

African Adventurer, Identified as Former Gambler in Yukon Territory

Well Known by Those Who Witnessed Stirring Times in Early Days of Alaska

Vancouver, August 26.—That John Ward Rogers, the American who this week was reported killed in Central Africa, was none other than "Jim" Rogers, a man famous as a gambler at Dawson in the early days of the Yukon gold activity, is the assertion of a number of Vancouver men, who were acquainted with the latter.

The story of Jim Rogers' life in Alaska, as they tell it, is as romantic and spectacular as is the life of John Ward Rogers in the African wilds. "Jim" Rogers is described by "Burrhead" Bill, the Monte Carlo saloon in Dawson, in 1888, his entry into the country being made the year before, fighting his way from the bitter trail with the others who passed inland that year. It was during the trip over the trail that he first showed himself a leader and a commander. At Dawson he became a reckless "devil-may-care" character.

While on the northern trip he had also noted what he termed a "dark iceberg"—one with a perpendicular wall, which would not reflect the light of the sky. He thought the stars at night and therefore could not be detected by the officers on ship. Most icebergs could be detected by the "dark iceberg," he said, but this was absent in the case of these "dark" icebergs, with the wall rising straight up, and hence there was a great source of danger. It was just such an iceberg, he believed, that the Titanic had struck.

Professor Barnes also said that the microthermometer showed a very clear temperature effect due to ice in the vicinity of the broken arm. The arm to absorb of land. Ships could thus be given ample warning at night or in a fog of the presence of ice or land.

KING'S RANSOM IN JEWELS AT NEWPORT BALL

Newport, R. I., Aug. 26.—The marvelous success of the great fête at Beaulieu last night was all that society could find time to talk about today. The triumph of Mrs. Cornelia Vanderbilt is complete. Comparisons with the great dainties of previous years at Newport, of the season in Europe of Paris and London, saw all records for priceless pleasures are eclipsed by the younger and more daring leaders of the day, and give the palm of victory to Mrs. Vanderbilt.

It is calculated that not less than $10,000 worth of jewels and other valuable articles were sold at the ball. Many of these great glittering gems of fame as wide as the world and as old as the court of Solomon—were worn by the women, whose sparkling eyes and slippers feet waxed brighter and lighter as the strains of music played by a large orchestra defied the early light of morning.

Everything was real—nothing paste, tinsel or borrowed. The palms which arched the way to the Pavilion that were brought specially from the tropics and planted for the occasion. There were fruit trees from Cyprus, nutmegs from Cayenne, rare plant flowers in bloom from the gardens of long dead empires.

The furniture, pictures, the ornaments and the heaviest divans, all were Oriental, and many of them historical. There was carpet from Bagdad which had been perfectly round and of good color, and when offered $75 for it by a pearl buyer he took it.

USES KNIFE TO CONVERT SAND FLEAS TOO MUCH FOR PROSPECTIVE BRIDE

Spokane, August 26.—Thomas Fitzwater, who applied for a divorce yesterday in the superior court, alleged that shortly after his marriage, forty-four years ago to Charlotte Fitzwater, his wife and her relatives began a campaign to make him go to church. He complains that they were so persistent in their efforts to make him attend sacred service that the campaign became cruel and made his life burdensome.

He alleges that at last, after he had borne their campaign for many years, he attacked him one day with the butcher knife while in the midst of an argument about the value of church attendance. He alleges that he caught the arm and took the knife from her grasp, but the incident so unnerved him and caused him to have such a fear for his life that he came West.

Fitzwater is convinced that his family were the originators of the "Shall Smith go to church" campaign.
