The fashion of wearing a bodice of different material favors economy in this way: with two or three skirts and a similar number of bodices, selected with a view that they are to be worn one with the other, or, as the immortal Gamp would express it, an extensive wardrobe, though under former rules, when fashion decreed that bodice and skirt should be precisely alike, these dresses would have simply numbered two or three only.

A very elegant dreas for New Ycar's day reception is of royal blue velvet, embroidered upon the oorsage and sleeves with arabesques of gold and amber beads. The square-cut opening in the neek is bordered with embroidery, and has a bouquet of crushed roses ast at one side. The skirt is short, the paniers of the velvet at the sides lined with pale gold-colored satin. Underneath the point of the corsage in the back is set a very wide velvet sash, lined with pale gold satin, which falls over the plain nutrimmed skirt. The only bead embroidery upon the skirt is that which is worked around the edges of the paniers. The bodice is closed down the front with medium-sized buttons of engraved mother-of-pearl and gold filigree.

Buttons may almost be classed among the luxuries of dress. In point of elegance and in the matter of price they have never been of gold and silver, set with mock gems, in Moreage or Florentine designs. These are models of art and beauty. They would also be models of extravagance were it not for the fast that they will never tarnish, being of the genuine metal. They can therefore terms for the paniers are models of art and beauty. pect that every Man with or without a family will insure.

It is surely as important that a man and his family should be financially protected against injury to his life and limb as it is to have their house insured against destruction by fire.

The Accident Records in any of the daily newspapers are sufficient to show the large numbers of people that are constantly sustaining injuries in some shape, and though those engaged in hazardous trades and professions and, such amusements as hunting, shooting, skating, etc., are more liable to accident, yet the majority of accidents occur in the ordinary routine of every-day life.

For a very trifling outlay the London Guarantee and *eddent Company offer $1000 at death by accident, and in case of disablement, $5 per week.

Keep your insurance for the City Agent of this old established and reliable company, the only British Company licensed to transact this business in the Dominion, who can offer you special inducements, superior to any other Accident Company. LON.
