The Ostrich Thinks It's A Wise Old Bird

When it "disappears" by sticking its head in the But it doesn't become a great many people to laugh at this simple display—too many of them are doing the ostrich stunt themselves! They think that the way to save money is not to spend it. They deprive themselves of things they should enjoy—and then spend much more than they'd need to on others. They bury their heads in the "I can't afford it" sand and never see the scores of opportunities to get what they want at unusual prices—and save as much money in the end. In other words, they don't take advantage of the double chance to practice real thrift and get the greatest enjoyment out of the money they spend that the service of The Free Press' Classified Section offers
