

Many other delegations have also advanced their definitions of "chemical weapons" and "chemical warfare agents" which, in spite of different wordings, are all very much characteristic and audio-visual. As such it can aptly serve as the basis for unifying the prohibition regime of the 1925 Geneva Protocol and that of the future convention.

So here is the conclusion: the prohibition regime of the future convention and that of the 1925 Geneva Protocol should and can be unified, and the appropriate medium to substantiate such unification is "chemical warfare agent".