

Legislative bodies and at various management and labor conferences, and speeches will be given across Canada by noted figures from the international labor field. Other organizations interested in international affairs are also planning special programs to celebrate the ILO's 50th anniversary. Canada will also contribute to the ILO's World Employment Program, and particularly to the multi-functional Caribbean Regional Training Center.

This double-fronted campaign to increase labor-management and labor-provincial co-operation within Canada and to improve Canada's contribution in the international labor field, balances the other pillars of the Canadian labor movement: to celebrate the 50 years of world achievement by the International Labor Organization, while planning to make the next 50 years even more successful in raising the working and living standards not only of Canadians but of all the peoples of the world.

The ILO's 50th anniversary is a landmark in the history of the labor movement. It is a time to reflect on the achievements of the past and to plan for the future. The ILO has played a vital role in the development of the labor movement and in the improvement of working conditions and living standards around the world.
