

My collar point was not, I fear, very sharp. But it has at last reached my throat and reminded me that, while expressing once again my great appreciation for the privilege of being with you this afternoon, I should now resume that attitude of proud but modest silence which becomes one who has so newly graduated from this university.

---

s/c