

MR. BATTELL'S IMPORTED ORLOFF.

"SOBOL."

This fine Connecticut horse, owned in Norfolk, was lately imported by his owner to supply the demand for a park or phaeton horse that should possess the requisites of size, beauty of form, stylish action, power and endurance. He is 15½ hands high, black, with three white feet, rather light mane, and a tail of fair proportions. He is a Russian horse, foaled in 1870, and came from the stud of a Russian Count. His movement in a carriage is easy, graceful, without the least chafing or friction, and he can be easily driven by a lady. But the power and endurance that lie dormant under ordinary usage are brought out to surprise the beholder, if the horse is allowed the stimulus of a short trial of speed. Sobol is represented as appropriate in the easy movement suited to the carriage, where his stepping shows him to advantage.
