On European Topics-The Fashoda Affair -Little Prospect of War Over an African Mudhole.

Marchand Nicknamed "the Mouse"-"Jack Shark" at Candia-Salisbury Running Things-Alpine Fatalities.

posed presence of Major Marchand at Fashoda, a correspondent says: Granting that the panic-stricken dervishes, in their crazy old penny steamer, really saw the tricolor waving at Fashoda, the crucial question is whether the French are prepared to fight in order to retain possession. If sober sense prevails, they are not. By no twisting of history can this portion of the Nile be made out as other than Egyptian territory. Schweinfurth so considered it in 1869. Baker subdued the whole neighborhood on behalf of Egypt in 1870, and three years later the unlucky Yussuf was the Egyptian governor of Fashoda. Thus, for more than a quarter of a century, it has been impossible honestly to label this place no man's land. But suppose the French ignore this fact, as do their historical newspapers. Surely, with a navy of sam-ples, as Lockroy courteously christened, France can hardly be so mad as to try conclusions with the English fleetan experiment which, as things are today, can only end in increasing and chastening the self-knowledge of the French admiralty, and a striking diminution in the number of their ships. Of course, the French politicians are charmed with any new opportunity of slanging "perfide Albion." Yet they care precious little, and perhaps know still less, about all this Upper Nile question. It is not burning or even smoldering in France today, but it might be lighted up by a posse of angry generals, eager to hide the stench of their own corrup-tion, and perhaps honestly desirous of escaping a revolution by letting the blood of Englishmen instead of shooting down Parisians. This is a real danger, compared to which Fashoda is but a harmless, almost a ludicrous, incident. Radical journals join today with ministerial journals in warning France that Gen. Kitchener has not gone up the Nile on a mere pleasure trip; he has with him 1,800 Soudanese, 100 men of the First Battalion of the Camerons, several Maxims, and two batteries of mountain guns. England, in a word, means at all costs to control the Nile Valley.

NO REAL REASON FOR APPRE-HENSION.

Cabling on the same subject, another correspondent says: Equally artificial is the interest taken in the Fashoda affair by the French and English. It is discussed in a theatrical manner on is discussed in a theatrical mainer on each side of the channel, but there is sion. Thus the cabinet will come in conflict with the people, while President Equation of the dent Faure, as the champion of the critical.

Thousand the attrical mainer on popular retening is still against a few as a form of the cabinet will come in conflict with the people, while President Faure, as the champion of the critical. to war over a swamp-hole in Equatorial Africa. An open conflict between Marchand's small force and the sirdar's Egyptian army is hardly within the range of probability. Nor it is credible that the sirdar, after a reconquest of Khartoum, will be asked to place the French expedition in possession of the White Nile region. There will be an exchange of courtesies, after the British and Egyptian flags are raised at Fashoda, and the whole matter will be relegated to the slow processes of diplomacy, as in West Africa, with the final adjustment of the frontiers between the French Empire in Northwest Africa, and the British-Egyptian Empire, extending from Alexandria to the lakes, and thence through Tanganyika to South Africa. The French people are so intensely preoccupied with the Dreyfus affair, which is now in a critical stage, that they can take only a languid interest in Marchand's adventures.

"THE MOUSE."

The Manchester Courier publishes an ccount of an interview with an limate friend of Major Marchand. He describes Marchand as an extremely modest and retiring little man, when at school, was nicknamed "The He is not particularly clever, Mouse.' but is plodding and determined in a quiet sort of way. The secret of his success in life is his talent for keeping on good terms with the authorities without forfeiting his self-esceem. He a romantic believer in the future of France as a colonizing power.

ON THE TAGUS.

England's new footing in the Soudan and South Africa has generally made her keenly anxious to strengthen her foothold on the Mediterranean and along a West African highway to the Cape. Now, with Germany com-placent and Portugal terribly hard up, a money deal is quite possible which vould replace England in force on the Tagus, as in Napoleon's day, and give her a naval and military base there. It would give her also a naval station at Cape Verde, and by fulfilling her right of pre-emption over Delagoa Bay, make her impregnable in South Africa, leaving Kruger high and dry, dependent upon England for acto the sea eastwards and south-

Long ago descerning shipmates christened him, "Jack shark," and Ednem Pasha may find that this uncomplimentary epithet is fairly well deserved. Were it possible for England to handle this muddle alone, matters would go quickly enough, though at some cost to the nightly rest of the sultan and the am-bassadors at Constantinople. This came out very clearly when the English sailors were murdered, and the interest for a short time became purely British. Then action was taken with quick decision, and what was more, was backed up by the startled diplomats of Constantinople, roused from slumber early in the morning. The offending houses were knocked down in Candia, and the ringleaders, or ruffians, cast for the part, handed ever to the irate admiral. Unfortun-

It is a pity that the suggestion made by the Spectator cannot be adopted, of turning out the Turkish soldiers, then telling Russia to boldly name the governor, and offering to stand in with her if the two other powers kick. This is an admirable idea mirable idea, but almost too happy for an imperfect Europe.

SALISBURY.

Lord Salisbury has been made a new man by his cure at Contrealeville, and, defying all the confident predictions of his approaching retirement from one at least of his offices, has resumed his control of the foreign office and sent Mr. Balfour to his beloved golf links at North Berwick. Lord Salisbury's return to the control of the foreign office has been the signal for fresh alarms about British interests in China. The terribly accurate Pekin correspondent of the Times is again the England has, he reports, alarmist. agreed to the

If this news proves correct, it forms the latest evidence of the accuracy of the nouncement made weeks ago in these dispatches of Lord Salisbury's prac-tical abandonment of the policy of the open door in favor of the policy of spheres of influence. England leaves Manchuria to Russia, and Russia recognizes English rights over the Yang-Tse Valley. The news also indicates the parallel lines along which England and America are moving in the far

THE FRENCH CRISIS.

All reports from France agree that the Dreyfus case has now brought France to the eve of a crisis, perhaps the most formidable in the history of the third republic. The situation is rendered more acute by the fact that it is threatening not movely the existence of the cabinet, but the stability of the constitution. A significant feature of the situation is the attitude of President Faure. He is known to be utterly opposed to a revision of the case, but the premier, M. Brisson, and a majority of his colleagues have decided in favor of reopening the matter, and with the resignation of the minister of war, General Zurlinden, as a result, there is but little doubt that popular feeling is still against a revimajority of the nation, assumes a formidable role, which may lead to grave Bashi-Bazouks have now left the town developments.

FATAL AMUSEMENT,

The season's record of Alpine fatalities is appalling. This week has added several to the list. It also brings one of the most splendid stories of heroism ever told. Prof. Nasse, well known in Berlin as the assistant of Prof. Bergmann, and Dr. Borchardt, with two guides, the four men roped together, were crossing the Piz Balne over a snow bridge, which is considered safe by the guides. The bridge gave way, and the leading guide and Prof. Nasse fell into a crevasse. The latter had the rope around his chest, and hung in midair. A half hour later, to relieve this intolerable strain, the leading guide cut the rope between himself and Prof. Nasse and disappeared into the depths. The other guide and Dr. Borchardt were then able to pull Prof. Nasse up, but he was dead. cheering to know that the guide who so willingly offered his life was not killed, but was found unhurt by the rescue party.

ZOLA.

London Life claims to have information that M. Emile Zola is about to become a Catholic priest. It says that Vatican was approached on the subject a fortnight ago, and that the pope has given his assent to the ordination of the distinguished author & x months hence. M. Zola's conversion is said to have been made by Father Gougon, the pastor of a small parish church, and an intimate friend of the novelist.

COSTLY HAIRS.

The Staatsburger Zeitung asserts that a barber of Bergedorf, who cut the late Prince Bismarck's hair from 1890 up to the time of his death, has, with the permission of the prince, collected the hairs, which he has now inclosed, three apiece, in gold brooches, scarfpins, etc., for sale, with a notorial document attached to each ornament, certifying that each hair is genuine.

Britain Ready to Take Vigorous Measures at Candia.

Fashoda Must Not Go to the French-The Mahdi's Tomb at Omdurman to be Destroyed.

London, Sept. 19.-Three or four more black thunder clouds are overhanging the political horizon of Europe. The diplomats are anxiously waiting to see whether they will pass away or burst. The Dreyfus, Cretan and Egyptian questions have become more acute, and it is difficult at present to forecast the outcome in either case.

An indication of the activity in the official world is found in the fact that the Marquis of Salisbury, who went for a quiet holiday, to take the waters of Conetrexeville, had a special telegraph office established at his hotel last week in order to deal with the mass of official telegrams pouring in and out. VIGOROUS TREATMENT.

It is understood the British premier has ordered that the most vigorous measures be taken at Candia, Island of Crete, where British troops were recently fired upon by Mussulmans, the execution of which only awaits the arrival of sufficient reinforcements of her Majesty's soldiers, who now number 2,000 there, while another batta-lion is on its way to Candia from

BRITAIN TO HAVE A FREE HAND. The most recent advices tend to show the powers are disposed to give Great Britain a free hand to obtain reparation for the massacre of Christians, and the insults to British arms. Admiral Noel, the British naval commander in Cretan waters, has already arranged with the other admirals for the immediate withdrawal of the military contingents. The British squadron now lying before Candia is powerful enough to raze that place in a few

THE TURKS' OLD GAME. The Turkish authorities at Candia are playing their old game of surrendering a number of nobodies, as the ringleaders of the massacres, while a number of beys, who are known to be the real instigators of the trouble, are still at liberty, and are likely to remain so unless considerable further pressure is brought to bear upon the Turks.

SCARED THE SULTAN.

As it is, the prompt action of the British admiral gave the sultan a bad fright. He sent his foreign minister to arouse the ambassadors from their beds at 2 o'clock in the morning in an endeavor to persuade them to put a bridle upon Admiral Noel, but he re-ceived cold comfort from the representatives of the powers. The British charge d'affaires replied to the Turkish representations in the strongest terms. He said the Mussulmans were "unprovoked murderers of British sail-ors," and that the British Government took the most serious view of the mat-

Thousands of the most notorious and fortified themselves just inside the military cordon, while, outside the cordon a body of Christian insurgents is gathered. They are like cats watching their prey, eager to spring forward if the Bashi-Bazouks attempt to leave the town. The chances of bloody fighting hinge upon the Turkish Government's reply to Edhem Pasha, Turkish governor, who has asked for instructions after having been notified by Admiral Noel that the Mussulman population must be disarmed. The British admiral is apparently determined to enforce the disarmament of the Bashi-Bazouks, whether it is agreeable to the sultan or not.

ON TENTER HOOKS.

The absence of news from Fashoda the important place about 400 miles south of Khartoum, which is reported to have been occupied by a French force, has put the British upon tenter hooks; but they have implicit faith in the British commander, Gen. Sir Herbert Kitchener, and have cheerfully assumed that the British and Egyptian flags are already flying there, whe ther Major Marchand, the French commander, is there or is not there. WARNINGS TO FRANCE.

The British newspapers have taken a most uncomprising attitude in regard to Fashoda. They are daily issuing warnings to France, telling her to stand off, or trouble will follow, and there is no doubt the Marquis of Salisbury will have the nation behind him, even if Gen. Kitchener has to oust Major Marchand from Fashoda by force of arms.

The Spectator says: "If we go to Fashoda and quietly take possession, France will not order us out. If she does, and we, naturally, refuse to go, she won't attack us. Nothing else, however, will serve her turn, as, if the matter is settled locally we must win. If, then, the French are at Fashoda, we do not see any reason to be greatly alarmed. The most they will do is to try to make the occupation ground for a good bargain. The Bahr El Ghazal (a river branching into the Nile a little way south of Fashoda, and really a continuance of the Nile) and its affluents might, it is conceivable, be conceded to her on certain terms."

WHAT THE FRENCH SAY. The French newspapers, which first took the matter quietly, are now indulging in truculent articles. They declare that if Major Marchand is really at Fashoda, he will stay there. The idea that Fashoda is within the Egyptian sphere is pooh-poohed. Otherwise, it is asked, what right has Great Britain to Uganda, which also belonged to the former Egyptian equatorial prov-

COST OF THE NILE CAMPAIGN. The interesting announcement is made here that the whole cost of the Nile campaign since 1896 has been only £6,000,000 ($13,000,000) including £1,000,000 spent upon the Soudan railroads, which 500 miles have been constructed during that time. Gen. Kitchener has decided to destroy the tomb of the mahdi at Omdurman, which was so prominent a mark for the British artillery during the bombardment. This step will be ta-ken to prevent Omdurman becoming a second Mecca.

SENSATIONAL SURPRISE

A Startling Sequel to the Bridgeport Mystery.

Grace Marian Perkins Goes Home in Good Health.

Her Father Had Indentified Remains of a Murdered Woman and Made Arrangements for the Funeral.

Middleboro, Mass., Sept. 19 .- The supposed victim of the Bridgeport, Conn., murder, Miss Marian Grace Perkins, arrived at her home Saturday afternoon in perfect health, to the great joy of the family and the unbounded astonishment of the entire community. Her father was not in town, for at the time of his daughter's arrival he was on his way back from Bridgeport with the grewsome remains which he had identified as those of Grace, and for which the funeral arrangements, including the digging of the grave, had already been completed.

Miss Perkins came from Providence, R. I., and was accompanied by her lover, Charles Bourne, and at first it was stated that the couple had been married. This was afterwards denied by young Bourne's uncle. So unexpected was the coming of Miss Perkins and young Bourne that outside of Mr. Thompson and one or two friends who had been previously notified, there were very few at the railroad station when the train came in.

The young lady, however, was immediately recognized by the bystanders at the station and the news spread around the town with incredible rapidity. There was a large crowd at the gate, as the young lady stepped from the carriage and ran into the house.

Just across the street from the Perkins house is a little cemetery and only that morning, in response to the request of the uncle of Mrs. Perkins, a grave lot, and the new earth thrown up beside it could be plainly seen from the home. Half an hour after Miss Perkins arrived home, a local undertaker's wagon drove up to the house, and in it was the coffin which had been ordered by the family. The funeral arrangements had even gone so far that the family iminister had been notified and asked to conduct the ser-

PATHETIC SCENE.

Taunton, Mass., Sept. 18 .- The few people who were on the platform of the Taunton Central passenger station on the arrival of the Providence train at 7:30 last night witnessed a pathetic and, it almost seemed, a tragical incident. It was when Frank W. Perkins, of Middleboro, was first told that his daughter was safe and well at home. When the train stopped a middle-aged man, with marks of care upon his face, alighted and walked along the plat-form a short distance, came to a standstill, looking up and down the station in an uncertain way. None recognized the man, nor was his identity known until a few minutes later, when Mr. Kingsbury came out of his office, and, looking about at the people, asked: "Is Frank Perkins here?" who had been standing alone raised his head, and indicated that he was the person sought.

"SAFE AND WELL."

Mr. Kingsbury stepped forward and placed in Mr. Perkins' hand a slip of paper, on which the words were writ-ten: "Your daughter Grace and Charley are at home safe and well." Perkins started as though he had been struck, looked at the train dispatcher in a dazed sort of way ,and said: "I will believe it when I get home and see her with my own eyes." At this juncture a young man stepped up to Mr. and introduced himself as David Surry. He stated that he had come directly from Middleboro, and that Grace was alive and well, and that it was his purpose to accompany Mr. Perkins home. In the baggage car of the train at this moment was a coffin containing the dismembered remains of the victim of the Bridgeport murder, and even with the assurance that Surry gave him, Mr. Perkins would not believe that these remains were not his daughter's. After some little delay the coffin was transferred from the car to a hearse, which was in waiting outside the depot. In another conveyance Mr. Perkins and Surry left for Middleboro.

THE TRAGEDY. It will be remembered that just a week ago the police of Bridgeport, Conn., were startled byla gruesome find of two packages on the mud flats of an arm of the Yellow mill pond, which pointed conclusively to another murder mystery to unravel. The package contained the head of a woman cut from the body near the ear, and the lower limbs, which had been separated from the body, unjointed and cut in two at the knees, then tied together again and wrapped up in a strong glazed paper. The head of the woman was battered and jammed on one side, and had a cloth tied over the mouth Coroner Doten had the parts of the body removed to the morgue. Later the head was photographed. The head is thought to be that of a woman about 25 years old, but it was impossible to form any opinion of the nationality. From the condition of the bundles it is thought that they could not have been on the flats but a few hours before discovered.

MISTAKEN IDENTITY.

There were various surmises and guesses as to who the victim was, and more than one person at first seemed to recognize the face of the murdered woman, which had been photographed by order of the authorities. Finally Mr. Joshua L. Perkins, of Middleboro, Mass., went to Bridgeport, where he viewed the remains of the young woman found in the Yellow mill pond near that place, and said he was satisfied that the dismembered body was that of his daughter, Grace Marian Perkins. Mrs. Perkins was overcome by the intelligence that her husband brought home, and was prostrated by the shock.

Their daughter was 21 years old, and had been missing from home since Aug. 25, when she left ostensibly to go to Onset, where she was to visit

Changes and Improvements Made by the Wabash.

Increase in Eastbound Shipments-Promise of Better Business.

The Great Northern is preparing to absorb the Oregon Railway and Navigation Company.

The value of the new freight and coal cars now being ordered by the southern roads alone aggregates over $2,000,000. Alfred P. Blosier has been appointed city passenger and ticket agent at Buffalo for the Michigan Central, vice Wm. H. Leslie, who quits railroad On the main line of the Wabash in Indiana and Illinois 25,000 tons of 80pound steel rails have been put down this season, and 80-pound rails are now being laid between Detroit and Buffalo. The Japanese Government has placed an order with the St. Louis Car Company for 250 street cars, to be shipped within the next 90 days. The amount to be paid for the cars, delivered. is $300,000. It was decided at the annual meeting of the Wabash to buy, build or lease a railroad, wholly or partially constructed, to fill the gap in the system and connect East Hannibal and Quincy, Ill., a distance of fifteen miles. The railroads are all sending out notices of an advance in passenger trans-continental rates that will take effect Sept. 25, and it is believed that the Canadian Pacific local cut rates will give place to the old prices on the same day, although the notice to that effect has not been sent out. One of the drawbacks the Wabash, management has is the large sum it pays for lack of equipment in hire of cars, the company in the year ending June 30 paying out for passenger, sleeping cars, etc., $101,789 34, for freight cars, $366,769 40, making a total of $468,558 74, an increase over the preceding year of $119,283 46. East-bound shipments of the past week were 57,216 tons, against 51,113 tons for the previous week, and 62,789 tons for the corresponding week last year. The Lake Shore led with 9,449 tons. Other roads carried: Michigan Central, 4,832; Wabash, 4,528; Pan Handle, 7,447; Fort Wayne, 6,979; Baltimore and Ohio, 3,172; Grand Trunk, 5,444; Erie, 7,278; Nickel Plate, 6,110; Big Four, 2,927.

The indications are now that there will be a general and marked improvement in the general passenger situation immediately upon the restoration of tariff fares. While there are some interesting questions involved in the adjustment of fares under the new order of things, it is believed that it will lead to the cessation of practices which have imparted to the passenger fare situation most dangerous features.

"The differential fare question is likely to bring about, sooner or later, the disruption of the Joint Traffic Association," said a well-known eastern passenger man. "The Baltimore and Ohio has given out flat that if differentials are abolished and no corresponding concession is given the weaker lines it will rebel. The latest gossip is that the Grand Trunk has announced that it will have a ferential on Chicago-New York busi-ness or it will withdraw from the Joint Traffic Association." The Baltimore and Ohio Railroad is to indulge in an experiment of using the telephones for long distance communication. Work will be begun in a few days on the construction of two new copper telegraph tween Baltimore and Pittsburg, 340 miles, and they will be so arranged that when the necessity arises they will be available for telephonic com-munication. One of the wires will be extended as far as Newark for telegraphic use. A new line has also been constructed between Columbus and Cincinnati. It will take 800 miles of copper wire, weighing 166 pounds to the mile, to complete the work.

The impression that he is dead is a pretty general one. As a matter of fact, Blind Tom has never been ill a day in his life.
