Criticising Other People's Happiness

By RUTH CAMERON

ONE man's meat is another man's poison" does not sound like a very important proverb. I often wish most heartily that more of us could get the gist of it into our attitude towards life.

For there are a great many people in the world who continually disturb themselves because other people will not find happiness in just the way they do. Apparently such people would rather see their friends poisoned by that which is meat to themselves, than fed by that which happens to be their poison.

One woman in my acquaintance never fails to introduce into every talk I have with her a petulant criticism of the way in which one of her girlhood friends finds happiness. "I really don't see how Janet can be happy out in the country out of touch with everything," is the burden of her plaint; "I think it is outrageous for her to bury herself like that."

Now Janet is fond of country life and is undoubtedly very happy, and yet I do not doubt that if her critic had the opportunity she would force the city life apartment, meat to herself, upon her friend, to whom it would probably be poison.

One girl cannot understand how another girl is willing to wear cheap and unattractive clothes and go without the little day to day luxuries for the sake of taking some expensive course. "I don't see how she can be so stupid," she says. "I don't see how she can be so stupid."

And yet, stop to think a moment. If you could, would you have things different? Would you want everyone to think alike? Would you like to be in a monotony? Of course it would. And inconvenient to the bargain, when the law of supply and demand bids to work. Suppose you remember this the next time you feel inclined to criticize your neighbor's way of being happy, and try to be content with choosing your own happiness.

And yet, stop to think a moment. If you could, would you have things different? Would you want everyone to think alike? Would you like to be in a monotony? Of course it would. And inconvenient to the bargain, when the law of supply and demand bids to work.

WEDDINGS

Bowen-Smith. Holy Trinity church was the scene of a pretty wedding this morning when Rev. J. Walsh united in marriage Miss Alice Smith, of Paradise Row, and Louis Bowen, son of Thomas Bowen, of St. David street.

BRIDAL CAKES

The ingredients required are one and a half cups of sugar, six whole eggs and two extra yolks, one cupful of pecans, chopped, half cupful of citron, chopped, half pound of dried chocolate, one cupful of molasses, three cupfuls of flour, one teaspoonful each of baking powder, cloves, and spices. Beat the yolks until light, adding sugar gradually. Stir in the molasses, then the flour sifted with the baking powder. Add the other ingredients, a little at a time, and lastly the stiffly whipped whites. This makes a stiff batter. Do not add anything to make thinner. Bake in a biscuit pan. Turn out when done, frost the top with an icing made of the extra egg whites and two cupfuls confectioner's sugar. When allowed to cool, cut into small squares. These are delicate, carried on a wicker mannequin.

IN OPPOSITION TO WOMAN SUFFRAGE IN GERMANY

Berlin, June 22.—Germany is a very unpropitious field for the advocates of female suffrage. The "German Federation for Combating the Emancipation of Women," has been formed, and is not entirely male in its composition. The watchword of the society is to be "true manliness for man; true womanliness for women."

India produces twelve million tons of coal per annum.

NOVA SCOTIA METHODISTS

A Busy Day in The Conference —Membership Roll Shows 8,641

Amherst, June 23.—Saturday was a busy day with the Nova Scotia conference of the Methodist church here. The first meeting was called to order at 9 o'clock with President Asbury in the chair and from that hour until in the afternoon conference was almost steadily in session. That the Methodist body in Nova Scotia is strongly in favor of church union was shown by the report of the committee submitted to the conference during the morning session. They showed that out of 1,200 officials, 890 had cast their ballots in favor of union and only 215 against. A large number of those not voting were absent at the time the ballots were taken in the church—over eighteen years of age—6,346 had voted yes and 1,650 nay.

FUSILIERS AT CHURCH

The 62nd Regiment had its regular church parade yesterday at St. Paul's (Valley) church, where the members heard an able sermon from their chaplain, Rev. E. B. Hooper. The regiment with its two bands, brass and drum, and bugle corps, numbered about 300 strong. It marched from the drill shed by way of Broad, Charlotte, Coburg, Garden and Wall streets to the church.

DRUG MEN HERE

The party of abolition and branch managers of the National Drug & Chemical Co., Ltd., who have been touring the maritime provinces, were in St. John on Saturday and were greatly impressed with the possibilities of this city. Those in the party were Chas. McD. Hay and wife, of Toronto; James Mattison and wife, Montreal; E. C. Mitchell and wife, London; A. C. Gardin, wife and daughter, Hamilton (Ont.); M. MacPherson and wife, Ottawa; and W. B. Gerow and wife, of Putnam. The men of the party were put up at the Union Club by Fred W. Fraser, secretary of the local branch.

President Taft is teetotaler, but declines to enforce temperance on guests at the White House.

Vincent Zeppiro, a young Italian was accepted by the conference and placed on the probation list and given a three years' standing. He is to work among his fellow country men at Sydney and will be ordained in that town at a date in the near future.

W. Martin, was also allowed three years on his probation course and was placed on circuit work with the understanding that he would take one additional year in college before his full admission to the ministry.

Peter Pellett was accepted as a candidate and will be ordained for special reasons. All the local evangelical pulpits in Amherst were filled by members of the Methodist conference today and many of the pulpits in the outlying district were also filled by the delegates to this gathering. A conference love feast was conducted.

At 9.30 a. m. which was led by Rev. Arthur Hickin, a former pastor of the church.

At 11 a. m. a number of young men were ordained into the ministry. The ordination sermon was preached by Rev. Dr. Chown, the general superintendent of the Methodist church in Canada.

In the afternoon there was an open session of the Sunday school of the Methodist church, at which Rev. E. W. Forbes and Rev. J. W. Aikens were the principal speakers and in the evening the pulpit of the conference church was occupied by Rev. Dr. Bond. His sermon was followed by the ordination of Miss Lenora White, of Halifax into the order of deaconess. The services of the day were closed by a sacramental service, which was very largely attended.

The conference will continue through Monday and Tuesday and will adjourn on Tuesday night.

When the studies are completed trouble begins. Russian law does not forbid these women to give advice and take fees for it; but it refuses them the rank of advocate and forbids them to plead in court. The law does not specifically say this; it ignores the subject altogether, but when last year the senate was asked to rule on the subject, it decreed that the sense of the law was against women lawyers.

The Duma decided to intervene. It has a majority in favor of feminism. In the majority are Count Uvaroff, M. Schinsky, and the whole of the duma left. According to the constitution the duma, when it wants a new law, has first to invite ministers to draft it and only if ministers refuse can duma members draft it themselves. When the government was appealed to it refused.

Again it was Minister of Justice Stuchkoff, who sent his assistant, Verevitch, to oppose. The courts, said Verevitch, daily try matters which women could not touch without losing all instincts of shame. Count Uvaroff retorted that this was what was said when women first asked to be allowed to study medicine.

On the government refusing the duma voted for a bill of its own. This bill was drafted by a commission. Probably it will be rejected by the council of the
