TO IRELAND BY LAND.

The Proposed Tunnel Beneath the Irish Sea.

After many postponements, the scheme for joining Great Britain and Ireland seems at last to be within measurable distance of realization.

The military reasons which made the English Channel tunnel scheme so distasteful have not to be considered in this case, for such thorough communication could bring nothing but advantages.

The wilderness of the west coast, for one thing, would burst into blossom the moment the fishing industries were brought into touch with better markets, while the influx of tourists, who are at present deterred from sampling its beauties by the terrors of a sea passage, would benefit almost the whole country.

The subject having been definitely re-opened by Arnold Forster, M.P. for Belfast, we shall probably hear a good deal of an Irish tunnel in the future.

Mr. Forster, in addition to the advantages enumerated, thinks that railway communication between the two countries would lead to the establishment of a new Canadian route; for Canadian steamers calling at Movilla would effect a saving of 900 miles on the present journey between New York and Liverpool. The greatest difficulty in the way of the tunnel is the money.

The capital, say, ten or twelve millions, could no doubt easily be raised, but as the work would occupy several years in completion, some provision would have to be made for paying interest during the time of construction.

The tunnel once decided upon, the various schemes, which there are subject to be carefully considered. If the selection were a mere matter of convenience, much could be urged in favor of a tunnel between Holyhead and Kingston, but the great depth of the water, to say nothing of the distance, presents insuperable obstacles. The nearest points of the two countries are the Mull of Cantyre and Tor Point, county Antrim, a distance of only thirteen miles. But Tor Point is such a desolate, out of the way spot, and to reach the end of Cantyre would involve such a long journey northward that the advantages of so short a tunnel would be quite neutralized.

Chief Justice Strong Attended Meeting Judicial Committee.

The Colonial Premiers and Their Conference With Mr. Chamberlain.

John Redmond, Parnellite Leader, Spent Jubilee Day With the Irish Prisoners.

London, July 6.—Sir Donald A. Smith, the Canadian high commissioner, as "Lord Glenora" has received many congratulations from Canada addressed to him under that title. He, however, tells me today that when the new year has passed, however, I venture to state that he will be found to associate him with Canada and with Scotland.

Sir Donald says that the cable reports from Ottawa are the first that he has heard of the appointment of a new high commissioner in London for the Dominion. The name of Sir Richard Cartwright has been mentioned in these cables as Sir Donald's successor. The belief here, however, is that the Canadian government would be glad to retain the position so long as he pleases, and he certainly does not talk in any way as if he was about to relinquish it.

Sir Charles Tupper is staying quietly at Chislehurst, in Kent. He comes to town occasionally in connection with his gold mining and other business. He is making no public appearances and has not even called at the government offices.

London, July 6.—In the house of lords today the Marquis of Salisbury replying to Lord Conesmar, said the delay in the settlement of the peace terms between Turkey and Greece was entirely the fault of the former. There was no delay so far as the powers were concerned, but Turkey had carried deliberation and circumlocution to such an extent as to delay the settlement of the peace terms. The danger was not immediate, they were at present no nearer to a solution of the question than before.

Having referred to the situation in 1878, the Marquis of Salisbury remarked that as in proportion to the circumstances, the year 1897 became analogous with the year 1878, so his belief was that the result would be similar. The Marquis of Salisbury further remarked: "The Prime Minister was presiding at the conference, as he did in 1878, the Russian army was then within a stone's throw of Constantinople and any suggestion from Prince Bismarck that a failure of the conference would result in the movement of a Russian army would have produced that effect on Turkish deliberations which is the desideratum now."

Montreal, July 8.—The Star cable says: London, July 8.—Chief Justice Sir H. Strong of Canada today attended the judicial committee of the privy council, it being his first visit since he was sworn in as privy councillor. He did not, however, take his seat. Sir Samuel Henry Strong will not take part in the Canadian cases before the committee, having already adjudicated upon these two in the Canadian supreme court.

Sir L. E. Davies, Canadian minister in London, reached London today to assist Sir Wilfrid Laurier in his conference at the colonial office, respecting the German-Belgian treaties and the Canadian tariff. Mr. Chamberlain has received from the Australian premiers the strongest appeals to annul these treaties, if found to obstruct the operations of the Canadian tariff.

Today Mr. Chamberlain held with the premiers the last of the joint conferences, leaving a week for closer personal discussions with Sir Wilfrid Laurier, before the latter proceeds to Paris, where he goes on July 18th.

London, July 8.—In the house of commons today, the Marquis of Salisbury, replying to the Earl of Mayo, agreed that the delay in the settlement of the peace terms was entirely the fault of the former. There was no delay so far as the powers were concerned, but Turkey had carried deliberation and circumlocution to such an extent as to delay the settlement of the peace terms. The danger was not immediate, they were at present no nearer to a solution of the question than before.
