CAPE BRETON MINERS WILL STRIKE TUESDAY

HALIFAX, N. S., July 2.—The convention of union mine workers of America, which has been in session at Sydney since Tuesday, completed their work tonight. The result of their deliberations was that a strike be called all collieries on Tuesday next unless before that time operators meet the entire board and endeavor to make a satisfactory settlement of the various and accede to the demand of U. M. W.
The convention also passed a strong resolution in regard to the alien labor law, condemning the action of the different coal companies in importing foreign labor to work their collieries to the exclusion of native workmen and notifying the different governments, calling upon them to endeavor to prevent any foreign labor from coming here as far as possible. They also passed a resolution condemning the Dominion Coal Company erecting fences about their collieries, protecting them with wire fences, etc., and endangering the lives of the workmen.
President McDougall speaks very hopefully of the result of the strike. He said they were prepared to hold out against the company for two years if necessary. They had funds sufficient to finance a strike for an indefinite period and at present had from $50,000 to $100,000 in funds. Money was no consideration with them. Among the U. M. W. officials here are international vice-president E. S. McCullough, Harry Bonfield, Peter Patterson, Con. Callaghan and Chas. Hargrave, all of the international executive board. Mr. McDougall would say nothing in regard to Secretary Moffatt's statement that the P. W. A. would remain at work in the event of a strike. He said they would have 95 per cent. of the employees of the coal company with them when they went out on Tuesday.

WIRELESS TO HELP IN SAVING FORESTS

Signal Boxes to be Established and Rangers to be Taught the Code.

Lumbermen of the Northwest Say More Timber is Lost by Flames Than Cut by Saws

STOKANE, Wash., July 2.—Veteran timber cruisers in the inland empire declare the time is not far distant when "C. Q. D." messages will be flashed by wireless telegraph as a solution of the problem of scientific fire fighting in the forests of Washington, Oregon, Idaho, Nevada, Montana, California and British Columbia, which contain more than seven hundred million acres of standing timber, the patrolling of which costs the lumber companies and the United States government service hundreds of thousands of dollars a year, in addition to the enormous expense involved in constructing and maintaining the government lines of communication.
Lumbermen in Spokane say that more timber is destroyed annually by fires than is cut by the saws, and add that if some adequate protection could be devised the standing timber in the northwest would last for centuries. They have numerous state and interstate organizations, the largest being the Pacific Northwest Forest Protection and Conservation Association, a federation of fire protective leagues in Washington, Idaho, Oregon, Montana and California, headed by Albert L. Fawcett of Spokane. This organization has hundreds of men in its employ, but their means of communication are not extensive enough to cover the vast areas, the result being that much of it is unprotected.
The plan advocated by R. H. Armstrong, an expert operator, is to establish a system of wireless signal boxes and teach the forest rangers the code so that with the first alarm they could locate the blaze and summon assistance before the fire gained much headway. This would eliminate the danger of cutting off communication by fires destroying the poles and trees falling across wires. Probably the most important thing is the saving of life. Every year since 1870 an average of fifty persons have been burned to death in the United States forest fires, making a total of nearly two thousand lives sacrificed to flames which might have been prevented.

VAST AREAS OF TIMBER.
Armstrong maintains that the chief reason for the spread of the fire is that after a blaze is discovered a long time elapses before the alarm can be sounded and aid summoned to fight the flames. Many of the large lumber companies of this Pacific Northwest have connecting camps of forest rangers, but this was given up for the reason that the fires would burn the poles or the wind would blow them down so often that they would be useless most of the time. Then, too, it was found that in many timber tracts the country is so rugged and the standing timber so heavy it would be almost impossible to stretch a wire line.
However the forest service has built hundreds of miles of telephone line and cut trails through the big overgrown forests in Idaho, Washington, Montana and other western points. These were found of good use during the fires in 1907 and 1908, but large areas were burned over as the result of the fires gaining great headway before they could be located by the range riders.

One thousand acres of virgin timber in Western Washington was destroyed last year, when the season was comparatively a light one for fire losses, and the losses in Eastern Oregon, Northern Idaho, Western Montana, Northeastern Washington, California, and Southeastern British Columbia were also heavy. This enormous waste of property and sometimes loss of life can be prevented to a large extent it is believed by the employment of the wireless telegraph for reporting them as soon as they start and calling assistance from all sides.
There are more than 550,000,000 acres of standing timber in Washington, Idaho, Oregon, California, Nevada, Montana and about 150,000,000 acres in British Columbia. Of the latter lands in the six western states 400,000,000 acres are owned by private corporations and individuals, who maintain expensive organizations to prevent them. In the state of Idaho, which has more than 150,000,000 feet of standing timber in its five northern counties, the fire protection associations, working with the state, have reduced the fire losses greatly, but it cost last year more than $80,000, or about 24 cents an acre, to patrol the 3,500,000 acres. The associations fought 500 great and small fires in the last three years.

GREAT SUM FOR FIGHTERS.
The Washington Forest Fire Association employed between 600 and 700 extra men in addition to its 75 patrolmen to fight and prevent fires in the western part of the state last year, and there were as many more at work in the eastern and north central portions. The logging and lumbering industry is the largest and most important in the state, and as the area of logged-off land is increasing constantly the fire hazard is becoming greater every year. This is also the condition in other western states.
The problem of forest protection is one of vital interest to those who are indirectly connected with the industry. The chief payroll of the Pacific and Northwestern states comes from lumbering, as is evidenced by the fact

FUEL FAMINE IN CASE OF WAR
Proposal to Develop British Oil Fields—Many in Burma and Nigeria
LONDON, July 2.—The Pall Mall Gazette urges the Government to assist in the development of British oil fields, especially in Burma and Nigeria. It points out that many ships in the navy use oil as fuel, and that many others are being adapted to use it. Without a large supply of petroleum many useful fighting units would be rendered absolutely ineffective. At the present moment the navy is dependent on the United States for nearly all its supply, and it is rare that the storage tanks contain more than enough to last three months.
"Petroleum is contraband of war," says the Gazette, "and it is not difficult to conceive a combination of circumstances which would result in cutting off all supplies from the United States and other foreign countries."

SUSSEX LAWYER DIES AT THREE MILE HOUSE

Frederick Lawrence Fairweather Had Been in Ill Health, Some Time
The death occurred yesterday afternoon of Frederick Lawrence Fairweather, a prominent lawyer of Sussex, Mr. Fairweather has been in failing health for the past year, and was a guest at the Three Mile House at the time of his death.
The deceased was 40 years old on Thursday. He received his early education at the Sussex school and later entered Dalhousie College, from which he was graduated in law. Shortly afterwards he opened offices in his native town, and enjoyed an extensive practice, taking an active part in politics as a staunch supporter of the Liberal party. For several years Mr. Fairweather was a councillor and later clerk of the county court at Sussex.
He leaves besides a widowed mother, Mrs. Douglas Fairweather, four brothers, W. H. Fairweather of Missoula, Mo., D. Harris of Wm. Thompson & Co., Winnipeg; Geo. M. Fairweather of Sussex, and Walter S. of Connelley & Fairweather, hardware merchants at Sussex. Besides the immediate family Mr. Fairweather leaves a wide circle of friends and acquaintances.
Walter S. Fairweather arrived yesterday to accompany the body to Sussex, where the funeral will be held on Sunday afternoon from Geo. M. Fairweather's residence, Church avenue. The body will be interred in Sussex Corner cemetery, the Rev. Canon Neales conducting the services.
Mr. Fairweather was a South African veteran, having gone with the first contingent from Canada.

PLEASANT WHILE IT LASTED.
He bit and itched. It was his wife and her mother talking.
"No, my dear," the letter was saying, "I must go tomorrow. I do not believe in a mother-in-law making long visits. But before I go, I want to tell you what a treasure I think you have gained in your husband. He seems to me to be near perfection. Are you sure, however, that you are not too strict with him? Do not be quick to chide him when he stays out late. Men need a little latitude, you know—say two or three times a week!"
The man stirred uneasily in his sleep. It seemed so real; but, alas, it was a dream!

HALF HOLIDAY NO BAR TO MATRIMONY

Persistent Couple in Des Moines Prove This by Getting Married, Anyhow.

Justices, Too, Not in Their Offices, but the Wedding is Not Postponed

DES MOINES, Iowa, July 2.—Two young hearts bent on matrimony can't be baffled and forced to break wedding plans just because the court house officers take Saturday afternoons off. No, sir, not if the two young hearts are as persistent as those of Clem Taylor, of Des Moines, and Louise Weiss, of Ottumwa, who met and overcame a combination of locked doors, absent deputies and elusive officials blessed with the power of performing marriage ceremonies.

The happy wedding party came to the court house on Saturday afternoon about three o'clock. Merrily they tripped down the corridor, boarded the elevator and rode to the court room floor. Right down to the clerk's office they went, all nervous and excited, for it was their first experience and they felt "so funny."
Then they received their first shock. The big door wouldn't swing, for it was locked, and on the door was pasted a big sign giving notice of the Saturday noon closing law.
That was a circumstance the party never dreamed of and it dismayed them for the time being. But they did not give up. The elevator boy was appealed to and he directed them to numerous places where a stray deputy clerk might probably be located.
The bride to be was conducted to a drug store and given a seat, while the near bridegroom and his brother started out to look for deputy county clerks.

Their search was rewarded when they found Deputy "Jim" O'Brien camped in front of a cigar store. He accompanied the pair to the drug store, where Miss Weiss was waiting and then led the whole party back to the clerk's office, there issuing the license.
Then, in response to their expressed desire to be married at once, Deputy O'Brien did a Marathon about the court house looking for a district judge. But there was none in sight, so he hustled the party across the street and headed them up the stairway leading to Justice Cope's office.
But Justice Cope wasn't in. Constable Griffin was holding down the judicial chair and he volunteered to aid the hapless Mr. Taylor and Miss Weiss. He called up Justice Rose's court, but Justice Rose was "out to the ball game, or somewhere."
"Guess there's no hope for you tonight unless you get a preacher," Griffin was saying when he looked out of the window and saw Justice of the Peace Livingston, of Saylor Township, driving by.
Griffin dashed to the window, leaned far out and yelled at the milking camp Justice:
"Come on up," called Griffin, "there's a couple here that wants to be tied up."
And Livingston came, and standing in Justice Cope's private office, tied the knot.
When it was all over the bridegroom looked at his watch and remarked that it had taken exactly two hours and a half to get married.

JUNIOR MEMBERS TO TAKE OUTING

On Wednesday, July 14th, members of the Natural History Society will be the guests of Dr. G. F. Matthews at his summer home, Gondola Point.
They leave via the steamer Hampton at 9 o'clock and during the day's outing papers will be read and speeches delivered by various members.
About sixteen junior members of the society leave on the 2:25 train Monday morning for Walsford. They will be accompanied on the outing by John McKinnon and Curator McIntosh and will spend the week in the woods of that district.
The youthful members seem greatly taken with the idea and will no doubt acquire much interesting and valuable information of the natural resources of the province beside having a most enjoyable outing.
