THE STAR SONG. A CHRISTMAS CAROL BY HARRISON.

Talks, that clear and heavenly tongue, Where is the babe that lately sprung? Look he the little babe among?

Or say, if this new birth of dawn, Sleeps, laid within some ark of ivory, Scattered with dew-drops, those saint clear All doubts, and manifest the where.

Declare to us, bright Star, if I shall seek Him in the morning's blushing cheek, Or search the beds of sleep through, To find him out?

But only come and sing and sing, My children, sing and sing, A king, before conception crowned.

Come then, come then, and let us bring Into our party Twelfth-day King, Back over the hills and down the vale.

And when night comes we'll give him waunting, And that his treble honors may be seen, My children, sing and sing, A king, before conception crowned.

Police matters are dull in Portland as in the city. The only prisoner arrested, however, made as much trouble as he could. Wm. Campbell was the name of the man, and he was given in charge by Wm. Dixon, who charged him with being drunk in his house and beating and abusing his wife. When taken charge of by the police he violently resisted, and tore policeman Morrell's coat. His case was inquired into this morning by the Magistrate, and a fine of $20 was imposed with $4 to be paid for repairing the coat. The defendant has been sentenced to the Penitentiary for two months. He chose the latter alternative, as he had not the cash to pay.
