

Dr. Woolverton, Professor of Geology in the Western University; "The Land of Evangeline," with views and photographs of the historical places visited, Miss Priddis; "Light," Mrs. Evans; "Health Hints" and "Emergencies," Miss Tye, Superintendent of the General Hospital; "Conchology," with display of beautiful shells and other curiosities of the sea, Dr. Woolverton. Our thanks are due to all those who so kindly aided us in these Saturday evening talks.

The social element in our work has not been neglected, and we have endeavored by monthly receptions, together with the facilities which our home-like rooms always afford for rest, reading, or social intercourse, to develop the social side of our natures, to strengthen the bonds of union among our members, and to bring into fellowship the "stranger within our gates." These have taken many forms, among which may be mentioned: The celebration of time-honored Hallowe'en in regulation style, with taffy-pulling, popcorn popping and games; our annual Thanksgiving Tea with its well-spread and tastefully decorated tables and happy faces gathered around them; an evening with "Common Things," when several of the members represented articles in common use, such as a piece of Brussels carpet, a sheet of note paper, a piece of old iron, a bit of string, and narrated the history of their formation. Much useful information was gleaned and interest aroused in the marvels of familiar objects.

Another evening was spent with the nations. The characteristics of different