

as during the payment, it was evident, liquor was in the Reserve, and, he saw on the road, several under its influence: In Brantford too, on Saturday last, six Nations were conspicuous, causing the newspapers to notice their intemperance, - and, he had to turn one of two out of the Indian Office: ~~the~~ Yesterday, on the foot-path, he took from the pocket of an elderly Indian, a quart of some horrible stuff, called whiskey.

Now, if the good men and some of the six Nations, would combine, and inform upon all offenders, they would soon put a stop to such drinking with all its evils, - and, he hoped their present deliberations, will result in something more effective than the past, - and, they knew, could rely upon his best support.

Discussion on the several matters referred to, followed.

Mr. Cleghorn
speaks.

With regard to the recent shameful act at the Mill, Mr. Cleghorn spoke, and also gave a reminder, in a sketch of the origin of the Mills; - their cost of about $8,000 ^{of expense} free to the six Nations; their beneficial results. He made several suggestions, and closed, by stating his intention shortly, to make his final report to the Ontario Government, copy of which, he will hand to their Sept, when the Mills will be handed over to
